Code changes suggested

Village may require home fire alarms

Fire-alarm systems eventually may be required in Buffalo Grove homes under a proposed revision in the village's fire code being considered by village officials.

A change in the fire code suggested by William Dettmer, building commissioner, would require installation of warning systems in all new houses. Existing houses would have to be equipped with the alarm devices when they are sold.

Dettmer said 8 of every 10 fire deaths occur in homes. "Whether families involved in night-time dwelling fires escape or not often depends upon the presence of fire alarms in their homes," he told the village board in a workshop session this week.

Dettmer said most home fire-detection devices are available for $45.

He described the code changes as

"probably one of the most important codes we'll ever pass. It really will affect the life and safety of the people."

The village board is expected to consider the proposals in about three weeks.

VILLAGE PRES. Gary Armstrong said Tuesday officials were "impressed" with Dettmer's presentation and "will probably adopt the revised ordinance. It's all for the protection of the citizens of the community."

Dettmer also suggested the sprinkler system requirements in apartment and commercial buildings be made stricter. Sprinklers are mandatory in storage areas, workshops and garages of apartment buildings of at least five stories. Dettmer's proposed revision would extend the sprinkler system to hallways, and apply to apartment buildings exceeding three stories.

Sprinklers also would be required in commercial buildings of at least 10,000 square feet, rather than the current 12,000-square-foot minimum.

DETTMER SAID owners of existing buildings would not be required to install sprinklers, but by 1977, would have to install pull-box fire alarms and smoke detectors activated by combustible materials. "It would be very hard to have a guy put in a sprinkler system in an existing building," he said. He estimated the cost of a sprinkler system at $1 per square foot.

Another proposed change in the fire code would call for the use of masonry rather than dry wall materials in the construction of firewalls.

The current village fire ordinances were adopted in 1965.

Palwaukee fails runway-plan rules

by STEVE FORSYTH

Palwaukee Airport near Wheeling apparently fails to meet several Federal Aviation Administration standards for runway design, a congressional subcommittee studying air traffic safety has found.

U.S. Rep. Jack Brooks, D-Tex., chairman of the government activities subcommittee of the House Committee on Government Operations, said, "If the facts presented are accurate, Palwaukee apparently does not meet several FAA regulations contained in Part 77, Code of Federal Regulations."

Brooks said FAA officials have told him the standards in question are not a threat to air safety, and they plan no immediate action to make Palwaukee comply with the regulations.

In a letter to William Rogers, chairman of Wheeling's Palwaukee Steering Committee, Brooks said the airport "does not appear to have established the required surface distances at the end of Runway 34-16, does not have 500 or 1,000-foot primary surface widths paralleling the central line of the runway at certain locations, and does not appear to have the threshold lights located the proper distances from the edges of Palatine, Wolf and Hintz roads."

BROOKS SAID his conclusions were drawn after a review of information supplied by Rogers' committee and a discussion with FAA officials in Washington, D.C.

"It is 'FAA's position that these standards are not mandatory, but simply recommended guidelines,'" Brooks said.

A recent transportation study approved by the Northeastern Illinois Planning Commission mentioned that several million dollars in improvements would have to be made at Palwaukee to meet federal standards if it were to be converted to a municipal airport, as recommended in the plan.

"FAA also takes the position that it has no authority to regulate the length of the runway or established aircraft weight limitations at privately owned airports," Brooks said. He recommended to Rogers that the local authorities seek enforcement of the conditions in the zoning permit.

"It is suggested that you attempt to establish the fact that Runway 34-16 exceeds the length and weight limits prescribed by the Cook County Zoning Board," he said. "It is my understanding that FAA would not attempt to prevent a state or local authority from enforcing the zoning permit."

THE COUNTY, in a joint suit with Wheeling, recently lost an appeal to control the size and weight of airplanes landing at Palwaukee. After the Illinois Appellate Court decision in September 1974, a request was sent to the Illinois Supreme Court to hear the case. The Supreme Court has not yet answered the request, Rogers said.

The Appellate Court panel of three judges said the right to regulate the weight of aircraft is under the jurisdiction of the FAA, and not the county or village. The county maintains it had control because of zoning agreements made when the airport runways were built and extended.

Rogers said the court has said the authority to control use of the airport is in the jurisdiction of the FAA, but the FAA has declined any authority except to control air traffic and traffic patterns.

"If the FAA doesn't have the authority, the county should have it," Rogers said. He said the issue may be heard by the Supreme Court because it could affect the operations of more than 300 airports in Illinois. Rogers says counties control airports in most areas of the state.

Rogers and other village residents have complained about low-flying planes approaching the airport over Wheeling, including one glide path that extends

List of building improvements to be studied

A "very rough" list of building improvements, which could cost about $24 million, will be presented tonight by a High School Dist. 214 citizens' committee.

The 40-member committee will meet at 8 p.m. in the district administration center, 789 W. Kensington Rd., Mount Prospect.

James Stoll, committee chairman, said Tuesday the rough cost estimate for the massive list of improvements proposed for the district's eight schools, was "subject to professional refinement" and was not final.

Stoll estimated that half of the total cost involved would go into major improvements and renovation at the district's oldest schools, Forest View and Arlington.

Stoll said the committee will decide tonight whether to request professional help for estimating costs of proposed additions and improvements.

The committee has been working for the past several months, touring buildings to assess needs and getting cost estimates for improvements that range from fieldhouses and swimming pools to greenhouses and additional classroom space.

Sewage plant's effects probed

by TONI GINETTI

Being a guinea pig for science may be valuable for mankind, but it's not much of a way to spend a second birthday.

Little Kristen Schweitzer of Hoffman Estates had put up with getting her hair trimmed and saying "ah" for the girl who dabbed a cotton swab in her throat. But when the woman neared with the needle to draw blood, Kristen had had about enough.

And when a lower lip starts quivering, you don't tell a 2-year-old to be a good girl because she's helping to determine if living near a sewage-treatment plant will be harmful to her health someday.

For Kristen, her three sisters and parents and 200 other persons living in Schaumburg, Palatine, Hoffman Estates, Rolling Meadows, Elk Grove Village, Itasca and Roselle, these test results will determine if the operation of the John E. Egan Water Reclamation Plant in Schaumburg may cause health problems to those living near it.

A lock of Kristen Schweitzer's hair comes off Friday.

Tests to determine if local residents will be affected by the operation of the John E. Egan Water Reclamation Plant in Schaumburg are being conducted on 220 persons. The residents all live within a two-mile radius of the new filtration plant, between Meacham Road and Ill. Rte. 53 south of Schaumburg Road.

The $43 million plant will open this spring to provide sewage treatment for more than 180,000 persons living in parts of Schaumburg, Palatine and Elk Grove townships. It will be the world's largest tertiary treatment plant with a capacity of 30 million gallons per day.

The tests under way have been commissioned by the federal Environmental Protection Agency to determine if the aeration process that will be used at the plant for waste filtration can produce harmful side effects to nearby residents.

Samples of blood, hair, human waste and saliva as well as soil and water samples from the area will be taken at four different times, twice before the plant opens and twice after it opens.

Volunteers participating in the testing are being paid. The first testing was completed in October and the second was finished Friday. The final two tests will be conducted in October and next January after the plant is operating.

Palwaukee fails runway-plan rules

Board rejects Rob Roy plan

The Mount Prospect Village Board Tuesday night in effect rejected plans to build 2,350 apartment units on the 200-acre Rob Roy Golf Course. The decision, which followed more than a year of public hearings and discussions, was greeted with cheers and applause by 150 residents of Mount Prospect and Prospect Heights who jammed the board chambers. Officials of Kenroy Inc., Skokie, developer of the project, have indicated they will seek to have the property rezoned by the county for 4,500 dwelling units — the amount originally sought in Mount Prospect.

Ma Bell seeking rate hike

Illinois Bell Telephone Co. has asked the Illinois Commerce Commission for permission to raise rates in Schaumburg, Hoffman Estates and Elk Grove Village 25 to 30 cents a month for residential customers and $1 to $1.75 for business customers. A Bell spokesman said the increase is needed because of the growing number of telephones in the calling area. The new rates would go into effect Feb. 28.

Poll planned on X-rated films

Palatine residents may be polled to determine if they support a ban on X-rated movies in the village. Village Pres. Wendell E. Jones has directed two village committees to find out what standards the community feels should be set for movies. The issue was raised by the recent showing of "The Sex Shop," an X-rated movie, at the Willow Creek Theater. Jones said of 16 letters he received, 15 writers supported a ban on blue movies. "I don't want to interfere with anyone's rights but you can go too far the other way, too," he said. "A higher standard may be appropriate."

Bieber release in February

William Bieber, former Wheeling building director who pleaded guilty last year to federal extortion, perjury and tax charges, will end his prison sentence in late February. Bieber was released Jan. 17 from federal prison in Springfield, Mo., and has been living at the Community Correction Center in Chicago. He is in a work-release program that allows him to live at home on weekends.

Married-teachers rule reversed

A rule preventing married teachers from working in the same school has been reversed by the High School Dist. 214 Board of Education. The action came after school board attorneys told officials they would have to prove teacher performance is negatively affected to continue the policy. The school attorneys met earlier with an attorney for the teachers' union.

Woodfield Plaza landing pad

A helicopter landing pad is being planned on the roof of a new eight-story Woodfield Plaza office building in Schaumburg to be occupied in April by the Chicago-area staff of the Illinois Dept. of Transportation. The department's helicopters are used in location studies, accident and construction investigations and emergency injury cases.

Cafe employe admits burglary

An employe of the Ground Round Restaurant, 444 River Rd., Des Plaines, has confessed to stealing more than $1,600 from the restaurant Sunday morning, police said. Abner L. Shapiro, 49, of 6161 Winthrop Ave., Chicago, admitted to the burglary after being questioned, police said. He was charged with burglary and criminal damage to property.

'Quiet' price increases hike natural gas bills up to 28%

A year of creeping increases in natural gas prices has pushed Northern Illinois Gas Co. bills for area residents up by 25 to 28 per cent.

With little announcement, Northwest suburban homeowners are finding gas bills this winter that average $55 a month, an increase from about $44 a month last year during the winter season.

The average resident is now paying about $304 annually for NI-Gas, Daniel Parson, assistant vice president of NI-Gas rates and economics, said Tuesday.

"The increased costs are largely a product of inflation," Parson said. "Prices will not increase as rapidly this year as in 1974 and we do not predict a decrease."

THE INCREASED bills are a coupling of a 10 per cent rate hike approved by the Illinois Commerce Commission in mid-November and dollar-for-dollar adjustments in price based on increases in gas supply costs.

When the ICC approved the $62.2 million rate hike Nov. 14, 1974, the first general rate increase in NI-Gas' 20 years, consumers were warned of average $1.90 a month bill boosts or a change of 10 per cent.

In mid-December, when the Federal Power Commission raised the uniform price of natural gas, experts predicted 16 per cent increases in area consumer prices over four years.

But, both predictions did not include a purchase price adjustment clause that allows NI-Gas to seek rate increases as the cost from gas suppliers increases. Twenty times in the last year, NI-Gas has won approval of rate adjustments and Parson estimated Tuesday that changes total 15 to 18 per cent.

"The cost of gas has gone up substantially," he said.

Open house today at Panasonic Video

A three-day open house at the Panasonic Video Systems Division begins today at the company's midwest regional sales and distribution center, 1098 Greenleaf, Elk Grove Village.

Close-circuit television recording equipment for security systems and production will be on display at the open house, said Jack Warganz, facility manager.

The open house is today from 8:30 a.m. to 9 p.m. and Thursday and Friday from 9 a.m. to 9 p.m.

PARSON SAID that the total 25 to 28 per cent bill increase "could fluctuate. Some bills could have gone up more."

About 90 per cent of NI-Gas customers are residential gas users. The firm serves the northern third of Illinois except Chicago and some North Shore suburbs.

To control heating costs, Parson said that homeowners should improve home insulation and check storm windows to "cut heat losses."

Ford's plan called 'too regressive'

Ullman files $18 billion tax cut

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Rep. Al Ullman, D-Ore., Tuesday introduced an $18 billion tax cut for individuals and business, and said his House Ways and Means Committee would work nights if necessary to get a tax bill to the floor by the end of next week.

Ullman called President Ford's proposed 12 per cent tax rebate "too regressive." He said the Ford Plan would grant 43 per cent of its benefits to the 12 per cent of taxpayers who make more than $20,000 per year.

Under his own plan, Ullman said, about half of the $14 billion tax cut for individuals would go to those making less than $10,000.

Ullman said he expected changes to be made by the Ways and Means Committee, of which he became chairman this year succeeding Rep. Wilbur Mills, D-Ark.

"The days of rubber stamping are over," said Ullman.

Here is how the Ullman plan would work:

- A 10 per cent rebate of 1974 taxes would go to everyone making less than $20,000, gradually phasing out as income reached $30,000.

- A $5 billion decrease in tax withholding rates would be accomplished by raising the low income allowance from $1,500 to $1,900 for single persons and $2,500 for joint returns, and by increasing the standard deduction from 15 per cent to 16 per cent of income with a maximum deduction raised from $2,000 to $2,500 for single persons and $3,000 for joint returns.

- Low income persons would receive a straight 5 per cent tax credit for earned income up to a maximum of $200. This credit would phase out between $4,000 and $8,000 in income.

- The investment tax credit, designed to induce businesses to invest in new plants and equipment, would be raised from 7 per cent to 10 per cent. The tax credit's limitations would be refigured to allow public utilities to take full advantage of available credits.

- Small businesses would get a tax break through an increase from $25,000 to $35,000 in the amount of corporate profits taxed at 22 per cent. Profits above that amount are taxed at a 48 per cent rate.

- To encourage re-investment in utilities, stockholders who reinvest in company stock would not be taxed until the stock is disposed of.

By getting the bill to the House floor by the end of next week, Ullman said the measure would be ready for House action by late February, after the 10-day Lincoln birthday recess.

In other economic developments Tuesday:

- President Ford and congressional leaders agreed to find a compromise on action to ease the recession and the energy shortage. Congressional leaders and White House officials indicated there was relatively little disagreement on Ford's proposal to cut personal and corporate income taxes to spur the economy. The critical issue was described as Democratic opposition to Ford's order last week that foreign oil import fees be raised $3 a barrel between Feb. 1 and April 1.

- In Detroit, a Ford Motor Co. executive said the worst in the auto slump seems to be over. Robert J. Hampton, vice president for North American operations, said Ford could recall by March some of its 33,125 workers on indefinite layoffs.

- In another indication of growing strength in the economy, AT&T's $600 million sale of loan notes was snapped up within hours after the offer was made.

Levi would investigate energy industry

Attorney general nominee Edward H. Levi said Tuesday the government should investigate the energy industry for any illegal price-boosting or production cutbacks. But he stopped short of saying he would head any such inquiry. Levi is appearing before the Senate Judiciary Committee hearing on his confirmation.

Church to head panel probing CIA, FBI

Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho, was elected chairman Tuesday of the Senate's newly created special committee to investigate the CIA, FBI and other intelligence agencies. Church immediately pledged "We are going to look into all aspects of the alleged misdeeds of the CIA and FBI" when the 11-member committee begins work, probably next week.

IRS halts information gathering

The Internal Revenue Service has temporarily halted its information gathering activities, but will not destroy the files it already has collected on thousands of taxpayers, a spokesman said Tuesday. Tax agency officials also denied that the IRS intelligence group was operating under secret orders or that it would soon be disbanded.

Nixon would like to re-enter politics

Sen. Barry Goldwater said Tuesday former President Richard M. Nixon told him he would like to get back into politics to help the Republican Party. Goldwater said he met with Nixon in San Clemente, Calif., last week. Goldwater also told UPI that Vice President Nelson A. Rockefeller would have "no chance" of winning the 1978 GOP presidential nomination in the event President Ford decided not to seek election.

Israel may pull troops to new line

Defense Minister Shimon Peres said Tuesday Israel would agree to pull its troops back to a new defense line 35 miles east of the Suez Canal but will insist on keeping captured oilfields and strategic mountain passes in the Sinai Desert.

Meanwhile, Sen. Charles H. Percy, R-Ill., — usually a supporter of Israel — said Tuesday he warned Israeli leaders that the United States might not support them if they launch a pre-emptive strike against Arab states.

London police warn of more bombs

Police cleared vast areas of downtown London Tuesday and warned the public to watch for hidden explosives because of a new IRA campaign of bomb terrorism that forced the city onto a war footing. Police blocked off traffic and kept people off the streets for fear of more blasts like those that wounded 26 persons in Manchester and London on Monday.

Marcos: situation in Philippines critical

President Ferdinand E. Marcos said in Manila Tuesday Moslem rebels have mounted a massive offensive which has turned the southern Philippines into a World War II-like battleground. In a speech over nationwide radio and television, Marcos described the situation in the predominantly Moslem Mindanao-Sulu region as critical and said the danger there was "growing and has become widespread."

$522 million in S.E. Asia aid sought

CAMBODIAN government soldiers take cover behind body of rebel soldier during fighting north of the capital of Phnom Penh. Reports said Communist insurgents were expected to launch new area attacks this week.

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Ford asked Congress Tuesday for another $522 million in military aid to South Vietnam and Cambodia, saying "we cannot turn our backs on these embattled countries."

Sen. Robert Byrd, D-W.Va., said Republican and Democratic leaders informed the President "it would be extremely difficult, if not impossible," to get the funds approved.

Without $300 million in extra military aid, Ford said, South Vietnam "may go down the drain" to military attacks from Communist North Vietnam. He asked another $222 million for beleaguered Cambodia also.

Both Presidential requests sought the aid funds for the current fiscal year ending June 30.

Shortly before sending the requests to Capitol Hill, Ford discussed his plans with Byrd and other Congressional leaders at the White House.

"They appreciated the frankness but they naturally were deeply concerned," said Byrd of the reactions of Ford, Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger and Defense Secretary James Schlesinger to the warnings from lawmakers.

Byrd told reporters as he left the Executive Mansion that Ford and Kissinger told the congressional leaders that South Vietnam must get the aid or "the North Vietnamese will take over little by little ... and eventually it may go down the drain."

Ford and Kissinger told the congressional leaders that the requests for supplemental appropriations were "imperative" because of Communist military operations in both countries.

Congress already has approved $700 million in aid for the Saigon government and $200 million in military assistance for Cambodia, plus $177 million in economic aid, during fiscal 1975.

The administration had sought $1.4 billion originally in assistance to Southeast Asia.

On the Cambodian battlefield, meanwhile, pro-Communist rebels launched a series of attacks against Phnom Penh's outer defenses in what military sources said could be the start of a new wave of shelling and ground assaults in and around the capital.

Sounds of machine gun fire could be heard in downtown Phnom Penh during the attacks on government positions east of the city.

Military sources said intelligence reports showed a force of up to 500 Communist-led troops was poised on the east bank of the Mekong river across from the capital.

Job offered to 2nd ousted lawmaker

by BOB LAHEY

A second former state congressman defeated in the November election has been offered a job by incumbent Republicans.

Edward McBroom, former chairman of the Senate Appropriations Committee, has been offered a post as consultant to Senate Republicans.

This job is similar to the one given last week to former House Speaker W. Robert Blair of Park Forest.

McBroom was a key figure in killing appropriations for four administrative departments created by Gov. Daniel Walker in the last session of the legislature, and was a key target in Walker's campaigning against selected Republican foes. Walker visited McBroom's district at least six times in behalf of the Democratic candidate, Sen. Edward Joyce.

A spokesman for Sen. William C. Harris, R-Pontiac, Senate minority leader, confirmed Tuesday that McBroom has been offered a job as a "personal liaison" man for Harris. But he said McBroom is vacationing in Jamaica and had not told Harris if he is interested.

The spokesman denied reports that McBroom, who earned $17,500 as a senator, had been offered a salary of $2,500 per month. He said the salary is negotiable, and added, "Sen. Harris has said that figure is not even close — that is, it would be far less than $2,500 a month."

Last week, Blair was hired by House Republican Minority Leader James (Bud) Washburn of Morris as a consultant on House operations at a monthly salary of $2,600. That contract is renewable every 30 days.

McBroom and Washburn are from the same legislative district, the 43rd, which encompasses Kankakee, Will, Grundy and Ford counties. Although all are traditionally Republican counties, McBroom carried only Ford County, the home of former U. S. Rep. Leslie Arends, Republican congressman for 40 years, following the blitz campaign by Walker.

McBroom served in the legislature for 10 years, elected once to the House and three times to the Senate. His father, the late Victor McBroom, also was a longtime senator from the district.

Veteran pilot sticks to fatal descent story

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Resisting efforts to shake his testimony, a veteran pilot said Tuesday he would have made the same fatal descent under similar circumstances that caused the crash of TWA flight 514 that killed 92 persons Dec. 1.

The testimony by Lloyd D. Brundage came amid mounting evidence of confusion at a National Transportation Safety Board hearing over who should have kept the plane safely above the Blue Ridge Mountains of northern Virginia. Government aviation sources, meanwhile, said they had uncovered a previously unreported incident in which a United Airlines jetliner almost hit the same peak that claimed the lives of the 92 TWA passengers.

The sources said the United plane apparently missed the top of 1,764-foot Mt. Weather by only 15 feet a few weeks before Flight 514 crashed there. Both planes, sources said, were on similar landing approaches to Dulles International Airport, about 30 miles west of Washington.

Evidence of a second incident in the same area might support indications that pilots and radar ground controllers are at odds over who should make sure planes landing at Dulles from the west clear the mountains.

Evidence made public at the hearing showed that traffic controller Merle W. Dameron cleared flight 514 for a landing approach while the plane was a few miles west of Front Royal, Va., without specifying any approach altitude.

The pilot of flight 514, Richard Brock, immediately started descending from 7,000 feet toward a landing approach altitude of 1,800 feet. His plane, bouncing through stormy skies, hit 95 feet below the top of Mt. Weather.

The crash was 23 miles west of Dulles and just four miles short of the point where an 1,800-foot altitude would have been safe.

In a statement given to the board, Dameron said he had never received any formal instruction on the specific approach he ordered — an instrument approach to runway 12, a little-used crosswind strip at Dulles.

Brundage said Dameron should have either withheld the approach clearance until flight 514 was past the mountains or should have warned Brock to descend in graduated steps.

"To me, in a radar environment on radar vectors, when I am cleared for approach I can go to the altitude ... depicted in the landing chart profile for the approach," Brundage said.

"In a radar environment, we have been trained that terrain clearance is the responsibility of the radar controller," Brundage said.

Tests probe filtration plant's side effects mer United Methodist Church, Schaumburg, were the second and last to be given before the $43 million plant near Meacham, Ill. Rte. 83 and Schaumburg Road is opened in the spring. The next testings will be conducted in October and next January.

The study is being conducted by the Southwest Research Institute of San Antonio, Tex., with a $280,000 grant from the federal Environmental Protection Agency. The project, said Dr. Donald E. Johnson, heading the study, is aimed at determining if the bacteria emitted into the air by the plant's filtration process will increase colds, flu or otherwise affect the health of persons living nearby.

"The EPA encourages communities to construct facilities like this," Johnson said. "On the one hand it's good to build them close to the areas they serve, but at the same time we want to know if it could be a health hazard. That's what we don't know."

JOHNSON'S TEST GROUP consists of some 220 persons from preschool children to persons in their 70s, all living within a two-mile radius of the plant.

"We had nearly 600 volunteers at first who all completed personal questionnaires," he said. Information was sought on a variety of subjects, including if the person smoked, how frequently he had colds or other infections, his occupation, age and residence. The 220 volunteers were chosen from those completing the questionnaires.

"The reason we're here is we needed a large sewage treatment plant under construction that fits our schedule," Johnson said. "We wanted to do a before and after study."

The first "before" test took place in October. Friday the group moved familiarly again through the testing, turning in overnight urine, feces and saliva samples before hair, blood and throat samples were taken.

"In the hair samples, we are looking for trace metals, like lead," Johnson said. Such metals can come from auto emissions and air pollution, he said. "The saliva and the throat swabs will be an indicator of bacteria."

THE BLOOD SAMPLES will also show levels of bacteria, virus and trace metals, he said. Researchers will be looking for increases in the levels in the "after" tests.

The samples are sent within 24 hours to San Antonio for testing, said chemist John Hosenfeld of the research team. Getting the samples, particularly the blood samples sometimes is the problem, he adds, especially among the younger children.

"We try to talk them into it, but we don't force them," he commented as one young boy resisted his mother's coaxing.

"If he doesn't want to do it, he doesn't do it," Johnson said. "We try to convince them, but we don't want to hurt anybody. We take more precautions because these are human volunteers."

There is a reward, however, for those who take part in the testing, $12.50 each time they complete one in the four planned tests. "If they go through the whole thing, they get another $25," Johnson said. "But I think these people more than earn the money they get."

DURING THE TESTS, the soft-spoken doctor talks to the participants, encourages the reluctant ones and takes photographs of the processes for use in the study's final report due in early summer of 1978.

"This is a very good group to work with," he said. "We've done this kind of testing for related purposes in Texas, California and Canada and there are always questions asked. But this group seems to be very enlightened."

"We have mostly family units in this group and the moms are pretty busy keeping everyone in line," he said.

There seemed to be more curiosity than concern among the volunteers as the testing proceeded Friday. Few of the volunteers indicated they were worried about what the tests might ultimately reveal.

"We don't think about it," said Mrs. Sadie Carlson of Schaumburg, the oldest member of the group.

Mrs. Diane Gross, Elk Grove Village, said the prospect of the plant doesn't concern her family greatly. "We looked into it seriously before we bought our home 2½ years ago," she said.

WOULD SHE CONSIDER moving from the area if harmful effects are discovered?

"I wouldn't want one any closer, but I don't think so," she said. "I think it's a good idea," she added of the testing. "They give you a status of your current health and they told us the first tests showed we were all pretty healthy."

"The money didn't enter into it," she added. "They asked if we wanted to volunteer and I didn't even know until later that there would be money involved."

"I don't object to the plant because something has to be done," another participant, Thaddeus Kozubal of Schaumburg, said. A six-year resident of the area, Kozubal said a decision on leaving the area if the tests are unfavorable "would depend on the gravity of the problem. How safe are you anywhere else?"

KOZUBAL SAID WHEN he was first approached to take part in the testing "I thought it was funny. But then I thought about it and thought it would be more interesting to be on the inside and find out about it instead of reading about it in the newspaper."

Are researchers expecting to find adverse effects?

"There is some speculation that there could be a danger," Johnson admitted. "You don't do research for nothing. There is a question of whether aerosol particles will be transferred to the populated areas and whether the levels will be harmful."

But, he added, even if the speculation is confirmed, steps could be taken to modify the plant. "There are ways of modifying plants. They are expensive, though. But it's like a lot of things, if it's not necessary there is no point in wasting the money."

The two-year study will also help the EPA determine if it should continue recommending the construction of treatment plants near populated areas, Johnson said.

In the meantime, the EPA and a lot of Northwest suburban residents can only "wait and see" what the results will be. "We're concerned to see what will become of it," one elderly Roselle resident said Friday, "but with all the cars on the road, you wonder how much worse it could be."

IF THE NOTE'S not there, improvise those words of advice came from conductor Renee Gladstone, who started the Wheeling-Buffalo Grove Dist. 21 Community Orchestra. Under her prodding and patience the group is growing stronger as members look to the day when they can reach a point of perfection — a concert.

Music's their bag

Community band ad libs, struggles...and has fun

by JUDY JOBBITT

The future Philharmonic they may not be, but what they lack in talent for the moment they make up for in spirit many times over.

An odd array of instrumentalists meets every Monday night at Cooper Junior High School in Buffalo Grove to play in a community orchestra.

Attendance is irregular with some essential instruments missing — like a string section — but the group is growing and finding once someone is drawn into the group, he can't stop coming.

"It's contagious," said flute player Joan Abrahamson. "It's the high point of my week."

A teacher in Rolling Meadows Dist. 15, she found out about the orchestra through a flyer her son brought home from school. A teacher and fellow flute player in Wheeling-Buffalo Grove Dist. 21 encouraged her to come, and she couldn't resist the calling, she said.

Although it was 15 years since she played in a group, the attraction was there.

No one belittles the floundering player who dusted off that instrument that hasn't been used since the homecoming game senior year. Talented performers also are in attendance to give the group balance.

IN A TRUE SENSE, they got together and "jam" with hopes that future practice and work will produce those clean, clear sounds they played in the past.

This week the group had a percussion section for the first time. During a Tchaikovsky piece director Renee Gladstone called out "Where's the bells?"

"Can't play 'em," came the response. "They don't have the notes on them. Can I play it on the chimes?"

The percussion section had its share of problems that night — like when everyone else was still working on the Tchaikovsky but they had moved on to the Mozart piece.

LATER IN the rehearsal Miss Gladstone called out to a section, "You should have a note there."

"Nope."

"Then we'll improvise," she said. "Play 'C.'"

The idea for a community orchestra had been in Miss Gladstone's mind for some time, she said. Last fall with the formation of Dist. 21 Self-Renewal Center, she received the encouragement and support to start it. The Renewal Center is a federally-funded program to discover and use community resources for the school district and community.

Through the center, she received funds to purchase music that also will be used in the district where Miss Gladstone is an orchestra teacher.

The group has hopes for performing in the future, but right now it is busy recruiting members.

THE STRING section currently consists of one violin, one viola and one cello.

The rest of the group Monday included two tubas, three flutes and clarinets, one piano player, two French horns, one trumpet and two percussionists. Usually an oboe player and two saxophone players also come.

Although the orchestra is unorthodox and the talents varied, Miss Gladstone has hopes for the group. Her philosophy is that a community orchestra is needed in this area and it had to start somewhere. Now that it's started, it's just a matter of time until it grows, she believes.

Until then, some parts will be missing, or a clarinet may double as a violin to fill the gaps. But these problems don't dampen the spirits, which is what an instrumental group is all about.

AS MRS. ABRAHAMSON said, "We all probably played in music groups when we were kids. We got our incentive to play from the group. When you play at home alone it's not the same."

"Now we have a group again and can have fun. It's like being a kid again."

The community orchestra is beckoning all instrumentalists with a Monday night free to come and play. The baton drops at 7:30 p.m. for an hour and a half of long-hair, free-flowing and fun music.

BACK TO MUSIC after years away, the orchestra is the "high point" of her week. Joan Abrahamson concentrates on her part during rehearsal. She said

Wed teachers can work at same school

by BOB GALLAS

The High School Dist. 214 Board of Education has reversed its policy of prohibiting married teachers from working at the same school.

The board's action came Monday night as a result of a meeting between attorneys for the teachers' union and the school board.

School attorneys changed their earlier opinion that the board had the right to separate teachers who marry because they said it could affect their performance as educators. The new opinion states that the board is required to prove teacher performance is negatively affected by marriage to separate the teachers.

THE BOARD ACTION apparently was prompted by an appeal of the policy by two district teachers who were transferred after they married. William and Judith Hastert married while working at John Hersey High School, Arlington Heights. Hastert was transferred to Rolling Meadows High School.

Hastert said Tuesday he was pleased by the policy change but was not sure he would transfer back to Hersey immediately because other personnel shifts would result if he did.

"I will go back sometime," said Hastert, who taught at Hersey with Mrs.

Hastert for five years before they were married. The Hasterts are the only couple immediately affected by the change, although several couples married during Christmas vacation would have been transferred soon had the policy not been changed.

GRANT AHLBERG, teacher union head, said there was a chance of legal action by the association if the policy had not been changed.

"Our lawyer had investigated and researched the legal possibilities," Ahlberg said. "We were reluctant to pursue that sort of action with this type of situation, something that open communication can solve."

McHenry Road protesters send state 'alarming' report

by BETTY LEE

Members of CORPSE (Citizens of Old McHenry Road Proposing Slaughter Elimination) have sent a report of "alarming" traffic statistics to the Illinois Dept. of Transportation in hopes of convincing officials of the need for traffic control on McHenry Road.

The report, which cited all accidents occurring between December 1973 and December 1974 on McHenry Road, is the latest attempt by CORPSE to get the 50-m.p.h. speed limit reduced to 40 m.p.h. and traffic lights installed on that stretch.

The study disclosed that 92 accidents occurred on McHenry Road, including a fatal last March. A summary shows that:

- Most accidents occurred on Sundays, (20), followed by Saturdays (16). The number of accidents was the same Tuesdays, Wednesdays and Thursdays (13) of that year, with the least number of accidents occurring Mondays (10).
- Most accidents occurred at night.
- 160 cars were involved, causing an estimated $40,715 in property damage. Ten of the cars were destroyed.
- The average property damage for each accident excluding the destroyed cars was about $442.

• Of the 92 accidents, 21.7 per cent resulted in injury. There was one death.

• About a third of the accidents were caused by speeding.

The report also cited that about a third of the accidents stemmed from the drivers making turns off McHenry Road.

"It just points out that something has to be done," said Karen Williams, CORPSE member.

THE CITIZENS' group has been told by state officials that traffic signals may be installed when the state makes budget considerations, Mrs. Williams said.

"This is not the kind of situation that can wait for a budget," she said. "You don't know every time you pull out of the driveway if you are going to make it."

The study and a letter was directed to Langhorne M. Bond, secretary of the department of transportation. "He knows about CORPSE and about me," Mrs. Williams said. "We hope we'll get a direct response."

The report will augment efforts made by State Sen. Bradley M. Glass, R-Northfield, in behalf of CORPSE. Glass is investigating the red tape in-involved in solving traffic problems.

FORTY ACCIDENTS occurred on McHenry Road since CORPSE asked for traffic signals and speed limit reductions in July, Mrs. Williams said. Those accidents could have been averted if the state reacted to solve the problem, she added.

"We're trying to buck red tape," she said. "There's no doubt about it."

In the letter to Bond, Mrs. Williams wrote: "I hope you find the enclosed report statistics as alarming and of such serious implication of need for traffic control as we do. This data only enforces the necessity for immediate action by your department."

Mrs. Williams said she is hopeful that state officials will listen. She said the group has the backing of citizens who live along McHenry Road.

CORPSE's next step will be to investigate the effectiveness of radar signs posted on McHenry Road. The signs were installed to warn travelers to slow down, a move made by village officials after hearing pleas made by CORPSE members.

CORPSE also will check the number of speeding citations issued on the road.

directly over Holmes Junior High School, 221 S. Wolf Rd., Wheeling.

ROGERS SAID the extension of Runway 34-16 in 1963 was endorsed by the FAA at a hearing before the County Zoning Board, and he charges the FAA knew the extension would violate FAA regulations and guidelines. He said the FAA also changed the landing pattern on the runway so it passed over Holmes school, although the county agreement required approaches over the forest preserve areas.

Installation of new instruments for landings caused lowering of the glide slope, Rogers said, although an FAA spokesman said no glide slope angle has been established for the runway yet.

Brooks said the complaint that planes fly less than 100 feet over the school is true, but he said that happens in several locations throughout the country.

"I share your concern about FAA's lack of emphasis with regard to safety and health of people on the ground," he said. "The rationale seems to be simply that air safety will enhance the safety of people on the ground."

BECAUSE HIS committee is charged primarily with overseeing government operations, Brooks said, "I am again bringing the Palwaukee situation to the personal attention of the administrator of the FAA. Hopefully he will take action to alleviate your concern."

Rogers said his committee recommended no specific action to the village board because of the pending request before the Supreme Court. He said his concern is the safety of those around the airport, and he feels the FAA regulations in use at Midway Airport in Chicago, if applied to Palwaukee, would offer that protection.

Rogers has battled the airport issue for years, contending that threshold lights are too close to the ends of the property. He says the lights should be moved several hundred feet down the runway to coincide with the approved glide slope. Airport owner George Priester has said the threshold lights are considered "displaced lights" and are not part of the normal operating system of the runway.

Village board wrapup

Animal hospital request weighed

Village officials will reconsider the request of a local veterinarian seeking to open an animal hospital in Buffalo Grove.

The renewed request was made Monday by Dr. William Fabian, whose attorney, Irving Capitel, told the village board he would provide answers to questions raised about septic problems and by objecting neighbors.

Last September, the board denied Fabian's request to rezone and annex a piece of property at Buffalo Grove and Old Checker roads. On the site is a two-story house Fabian hopes to convert into an animal clinic.

The property currently is in unincorporated Lake County.

In granting the request, board members said they would only listen to information on the questions raised last year. If additional facts on the proposals are brought out, the matter would be referred back to the plan commission, the trustees said.

Capitel also told trustees he would like to arrange a hearing with officials and nearby residents as soon as possible to avoid conflicts with state laws that prohibit the village from hearing annexation matters 60 days before an election.

Village elections are scheduled for April 15.

Lease OK for tennis courts

The board agreed to approve a 20-year lease with the park district for tennis courts on a piece of village-owned property. It warned, however, the courts may have to be removed in the next several years to make way for an underground reservoir.

The tennis courts are located next to village well No. 3 which may have to be expanded to accommodate growth in the area.

Village Pres. Gary Armstrong suggested that if the courts must be moved for the project, the park district be given the option to rebuild them on the same site once the work is finished.

Local drownings can be prevented

The saddest and most pointless winter story for any newspaper to report is the tragic drowning of a young boy or girl.

It's sad because sudden death to any person, but especially to a young person, is always tragic, and it's pointless because it does not need to happen.

Last week we almost had two local drownings. In Wheeling, a 10-year-old boy broke his leg when he became stuck in the ice in Buffalo Creek. In Hoffman Estates, 10-year-old Tim Beneteau fell through the ice. An alert companion stretched across the thin ice and rescued him.

But in December, 16-year-old John Cronin was not so lucky. The lad tried to walk across an icy pond but slipped through the ice. When police found his body at the bottom of the lake, Cronin's feet were mired in the mud.

It's too late to bring John Cronin back to life, but it isn't too late to remind children and parents alike that bodies of water, whether rivers, lagoons, park district skating lakes or abandoned quarries, can be wintertime death traps.

On many occasions during the winter in the Northwest suburbs, some of the lakes can be inviting places for old and young skaters. But at other times, especially during this year's mild winter, they can only produce dangerously fragile ice — and the threat of sudden death.

Parents and children alike can prevent drownings. Parents can begin by teaching and warning their children about unguarded lakes and ponds. It especially doesn't hurt to know where your children play during the winter.

Public agencies, such as park districts, village governments and schools, should also educate children — and no body of water should be ignored during the winter by those responsible for it, whether by a governmental unit or a private property owner.

Let's make it through the winter of 1975 without another of these kinds of needless, pointless tragedies that turn enjoyable winter recreation into a time of sadness for all of us. Winter drownings can be prevented, but it requires all of us to work hard to assure our communities of drowning prevention.

'Arsenal of democracy'

It's time that the U.S. made a conscious decision about its role as a major arms supplier to the nations of the world.

Statistics just released by the U.S. Arms Control and Disarmament Agency show we sold $29.7 billion worth of arms to foreign countries between 1963 and 1973. That's almost double the amount sold by the Soviet Union.

It's long been an unstated assumption of Cold War thinking that we must supply our friends with weaponry with which to combat the Communist menace. If we don't supply the arms, someone else will, it's been reasoned.

But as the old lines of ideological conflict blur, and especially as we become more deeply involved in Middle East conflicts, we should review our policies of arming foreign nations.

It can be argued that by offering weapons, we are stimulating the governments of poor countries to spend scarce funds on unneeded weapons. In turn, these nations only encourage rivalries with their neighbors, which does no one any good.

There's also something morally suspect about this nation's role as a merchant of death-dealing weaponry. Perhaps this policy is still worthwhile, but at the very least the policy needs a full and critical examination from President Ford and the Congress.

Reviving the mouse

M-I-C (pause) K-E-Y...

As the recession, inflation and January's cold crunch batter all of us, there couldn't be a better time for the return of that merry mouse and his hardy band of Mouseketeers.

Yes, M-I-C (pause) K-E-Y has ridden the wave of nostalgia back into late afternoon TV, and the first reports are that children (and former children) are signing up en masse for the Club.

Somewhere, there's probably a deep reason for the renewed popularity of the old TV shows of Groucho Marx, Superman and the rest of the old gang from the Fifties.

Whatever the reason, there's a message here for TV's tastemakers who too often give us entertainment that lacks the enthusiasm of a Mickey or the wisecracks of a Groucho. Indeed, as long as there's Annette, there will always be some hope for survival of commercial TV.

Or, to put it another way: forever let us hold our banners high, high, HIGH!

Let's show 'em the ice isn't too thin. Right, Jim?

Hits electioneering ban

An announcement was made during the Schaumburg village board meeting of Jan. 15 that effective immediately all electioneering will be banned during the town hall portion of the meetings. The portion is set aside for the purpose of permitting citizens to address the village board.

The dictionary definition of electioneering is "working for the success of a candidate, political party, issue, etc. in an election." If the mayor's statement is taken literally, one would have to conclude that residents of our village would not be permitted to express their views on future development, transportation, fiscal responsibility, health, safety, inter-governmental cooperation, accountability, citizen participation in government, consumer advocacy and many other topics because these are "issues in an election."

Application of this restriction to members of the board who are also candidates would result in both candidates removing themselves from the premises. Their very presence during this public forum could be construed to be electioneering as "working for the success of a candidate." Any member of the incumbent party who spoke would be "working for the success of a party." The ultimate conclusion to be drawn from the literal translation of the mayor's statement is that the village board should cease to function until after the April 15 election.

Udall is hand-shaking

'75 race is underway

by TOM TIEDE

GILFORD, N.H. — When, following schedule, the Morris Udall presidential campaign stopped at a home here for a reception, there was naught but embarrassed confusion. The home looked deserted, the front walk was covered with snow and there were no cars of the faithful to be seen. "Well," said a Udall aide, miffed but hopeful while he whistled for inside attention, "we are a bit early."

Early — and how. There are no records for this kind of thing save memory, but it appears the congressman from Arizona had established a record for premature presidential electioneering. It is 14 months until New Hampshire holds the first primary, almost two years until the national balloting, but here he is shaking hands and begging votes. "I want to restore leadership," he says. Yak, yak, yak and yawn.

At that, Udall's but one of many suiting up before the game commences. Jerry Ford announced his intentions to make a legitimate bid for the office last year, former Oklahoma Sen. Fred Harris has been sniffing New Hampshire trails for months, Henry Jackson has come, Lloyd Bentsen, Jimmy Carter — and any number of others who forage in secrecy.

"Every weekend it's someone else," says a local, "senators, congressmen, governors, Oscar Weinmeyer of Oshkosh — god knows there's still plenty of time to get more candidates than voters."

The natives, to be sure, don't normally mind. Incoming politicians drop dollars into the economy, create publicity which does things for the tourism industry — and, besides, some of the candidates are more fun than the frockhouses at the state fair. Says an observer: "We had this one guy come up one year who was so dumb he didn't know the state borders. He spent a whole morning in one town, smiling and waving to all, before he found out the place was in Vermont."

Yet if this kind of activity can be fully appreciated during an election year, it strains interest one year before. Udall is drawing scant crowds and Harris does little more than upset the population with schemes to the left of George McGovern. What's more, says Carroll County Democratic Chairman Don Ekberg, "This early, all they do is screw up the party organization."

When they come in so far in advance of reality, Ekberg reasons, candidates tear at the unity of small state politics. The result is that friends side against friends, resources are taxed and enthusiasm is wounded.

But the precocious candidates are undaunted. Udall, in fact, makes light of years past when he criticized presidential hopefuls for starting too early. His sudden switch in philosophy, he says, "Only shows that the older you get, the wiser you get."

Udall claims the lesson of recent American politics is that the nation needs new leaders and they can't be created by people going to the library and reading biographies. "We (the new leaders) have to get out and mingle. We have to be seen," he says. The oldies have the edge in recognition, Udall insists, and would unfairly retain it if early campaigning were forbidden.

The Udall point is correct but it rings with a dull thud because of circumstantial political realities. If the new leaders were showing New Hampshire new truths or politics this early, the contribution would be of greater value. Instead, Mo Udall looks greatly like Ed Muskie, Fred Harris has somewhat of a rhetorical resemblance to Ben Spock, and Lloyd Bentsen, though a new face nationally, looks, sounds and acts like the rich Texan he is.

Morris K. Udall

For all of their fresh identities, early campaigners here have lacked fresh insights — Harris wants to tax the rich and spare the poor. If the newboys are no more imaginative than the oldboys, early entry is a sham.

Still, the candidates push on, energetically if not wisely. Brochures, posters, interviews, 12-hour days, caravans, hohum. Why? "To be a good president," says Udall, "you've got to be good and you've got to be president." It's the kind of thing Harry Truman might have said, and probably did.

But never mind. The fact is there is another element in primary politics this time. Jealous of the attention New Hampshire receives at primary time, Vermont is contemplating holding its primary on the same date, which of course would prompt New Hampshire to advance its race at least a week, which might well force similar legislation by Vermont — and before we know it, says Mo Udall, "the first primary may be next month" and all this earliness would make some sense.

Oil-rich sheikh gives away Alamo

by DICK WEST

WASHINGTON — Everyone has been laughing over the attempt by an oil-rich Arab to buy the Alamo, and for good reason.

The sheikh tried to arrange the negotiations through a Houston attorney, which is downright ludicrous.

Anyone who knows anything at all about Texas knows you have to order things like that from Neiman Marcus.

But although the deal fell through, the offer was nonetheless intriguing.

The sheikh said he wanted to buy the historic shrine as a gift for his son, who had grown to love it while taking flight training in San Antonio.

One can readily imagine the scene that led up to the offer.

"Welcome home, my son. Did you enjoy your visit to America?"

"Very much, Father."

"Tell me, what do you consider your most memorable experience?"

"Deep within my heart lies a melody, a song of old San Antonio. For in my dreams I live with the memory of a girl I met there beneath the stars all alone."

"Aha! So that's it! What was her name?"

"Rose."

"And where did you meet her?"

"We met beside the Alamo. We went for a walk along a moonlit path that only we would know and it was enchantment as strange as the blue up above."

"I can tell you had it pretty bad. But what, may I ask, is the Alamo?"

"It's an old Spanish mission that served as a fort during the Republic of Texas' war for independence from Mexico. After Mexican troops overran it, killing all of the defenders, 'Remember the Alamo' became a rallying cry."

"And you remember it for another reason, eh, son? What was this Rose like?"

"She had lips so sweet and tender they were like petals falling apart."

"Hoo boy! What happened between you?"

"Broken hearts, empty words I know, now live in my heart all alone."

"Do you still miss her?"

"The moon in all its splendor knows only my heart. Bring back my rose, Rose of San Antonio. Speak once again of my love, my own."

"I'm afraid I can't get your girl back, son. Particularly when you don't even know her last name. But would it make you feel any better if I bought the Alamo for you?"

"Gee, Dad, just what I've always wanted."

Highway needs help

I have read in The Herald that the section of Northwest Highway extending from Baldwin Road to Hicks Road is to be repaired. I feel this is a worthwhile project, but I also feel the section of Northwest Highway extending from Hicks Road to Route 53 is in equally bad shape for driving. There are numerous potholes in the pavement that could cause damage to a car. I strongly urge that this section of roadway be repaired with the other section of Northwest Highway or at the earliest possible date.

English-American freedom crusader Thomas Paine was born Jan. 29, 1737.

On this day in history:

• In 1861, Kansas became the 34th state in the Union.

• In 1900, eight baseball teams were organized as the American League. They were Buffalo, Chicago, Cleveland, Detroit, Indianapolis, Kansas City, Milwaukee and Minneapolis.

• In 1936, Ty Cobb, Walter Johnson, Christy Mathewson, Babe Ruth and Honus Wagner became the first five men elected to the Baseball Hall of Fame.

• In 1969, Great Britain's application for membership in the European Common Market was vetoed by France. Britain became a member in January, 1973.

A thought for the day: Early American freedom fighter Thomas Paine said: "A bad cause will ever be supported by bad means and bad men."

They watch the watchdogs

and ANNE SLAVICEK

They come, these few, to watch and listen, comment or complain, and to affect in some way the decisions made by public officials.

Call them professional citizens, because they almost make a job of following their local governments.

By attending meetings or volunteering their time, they make some difference in the outcome of governmental action, although their effects cannot be measured.

Sitting on uncomfortable chairs at endless, uneventful village board meetings or other public gatherings, these citizens have the power to affect public officials just by their presence.

IDA V. O'REILLEY of Wheeling is one example of a watcher who has an effect, however small. She doesn't speak at village board meetings, but her presence is noted. She says of village officials, "They may be sincere, but I keep on looking for something behind what they are saying."

Tom Hamilton of Elk Grove Village has made a second career of flood control on Salt Creek, in addition to participating in his village government. He says, "If public officials aren't watched, they tend to do things they shouldn't."

Jack Pahl, also of Elk Grove Village, has been on both sides of the fence. A former trustee and board president of Elk Grove Village, he has in recent years immersed himself in a variety of unpaid public commissions and organizations, including the presidency of the northeastern Illinois Planning Commission.

On the NIPC board, Pahl frequently comes into contact with citizens who have taken an interest in various subjects. Many are extremists, and Pahl estimates their shrill voices get about 1 per cent of the consideration that goes into making a public decision.

He says there are several who do command a certain respect because they know something about the subjects that come up. He has particular praise for members of the League of Women Voters, of which Mimi Hynek of Evanston is an example.

MRS. HYNK is a former Cook County league officer and had become involved in public issues before moving to the Chicago area, but she now spends several days a week doing such things as monitoring meetings of the Regional Transportation Authority.

Although the league doesn't claim to represent all the public, Mrs. Hynek says, "We act as though we feel anyone who studies the issue will have the same position. It is for the good of the public, though — the citizens and taxpayers."

There are hundreds of other citizens who become active for periods of time when a particular issue arouses them, but the professional citizen has an ongoing interest in the conduct of public business.

Mrs. O'Reilly lived in Wheeling for several years before she began attending board meetings. She amplifies her concern by writing letters to The Herald editorial page, where she feels she can "open the eyes" of other village residents.

"I'd like people to be interested in their town," she says. She adds that she feels lost on Monday nights when no board meetings are scheduled, because they have become a part of her weekly life. "I wish more people would attend. We would have a lot better government in all municipalities if they did," she says.

HAMILTON PLAYS a more active role as a citizen. He began by watching the village board in Elk Grove Village, became enraged when he felt they paid too much for fire engines, and later ran for a seat on the board. He lost the election, and says, "Actually, I was much relieved."

Choosing not to lose interest in the community, Hamilton continued to appear at board meetings. "If you sit around long enough they'll put you to work," he says, and he became the founder of an aviation committee charged with coping with jet noise from O'Hare Airport.

That assignment lasted more than a dozen years. For the last few he also served on the village plan commission. Simultaneously, Hamilton was becoming more and more entwined in flood control in the Salt Creek watershed.

The work began in 1964 with a meeting in Arlington Heights. Hamilton reluctantly accepted cochairmanship because he had some background in federal assistance in flood control.

His experience was a carryover from his work with the Soil Conservation Board in Oklahoma. After moving to Palatine in 1958, he transferred his membership in the Soil Conservation Society of America, where he met local conservation people and was eventually selected for the North Cook Soil and Water Conservation District.

Public Law 566 is a useful tool in watershed control, Hamilton says, but when he asked about it here, he was met with blank expressions. "I knew we had a long way to go," he said.

BEFORE HE WAS through, Hamilton had pushed through an entire project involving five retention lakes, and became chairman of a steering committee for watershed projects throughout the Chicago area. His experiences carried him as far as the halls of Congress because the process became tangled in federal red tape.

Hamilton, a 45-year-old agricultural accepts a challenge. "Sometimes you realize no one is going to do it if you don't," he says.

JACK PAHL

Involvement also applies to Pahl, who is well-known among officials in the Chicago area. His stature is self-made, and he says of himself, "I essentially classify myself as a citizen because it is a full-time avocation for me." He adds, "I guess 90 per cent of public officials are part-time, which is good because they keep in touch with reality."

Pahl can be found in attendance at Chicago Mayor Richard J. Daley's Leadership Council, which was formed after the 1968 political demonstrations, and at the Harper College Education Foundation.

He also sits on boards dealing with regional housing, health and crime, much of which dovetails into NIPC business. He feels the time is worthwhile and describes it this way: "You are in a position to make a contribution, because of past interests, concerns and involvement." He has become a strong supporter of low- and moderate-income housing in the suburbs because of situations he has seen.

PAHL IS AWARE of "professional citizens" as they apply to his activities, and they have earned enough respect that the NIPC executive board has spent hours trying to work them into the decision-making process for the new regional water quality planning program. "We want the guy who has done a lot of research, on the Fox River, for example, but hasn't been able to get anything done," he says.

Concerned citizens find themselves devoting a lot of time to their interests, and have to work their own jobs around them. Hamilton says of the time he has spent, "A person like me is better off not thinking about it. But I have to keep pushing to make sure nothing bogs down now."

Pahl's time is flexible because he sells insurance, but he says a person who has to punch a time clock probably couldn't afford to become so involved.

Despite the time and frustration, Pahl says, "There are rewards. There is a sense of accomplishment. Every time I drive by the village hall I get a good feeling because I had something to do with it."

Some citizens come only to watch. Others become totally involved. But they all leave with a bigger piece of democracy than the citizens who choose to sit idly by and let their government go on around them.

'Extension' classes booming

Colleges start coming to students

by WANDALYN RICE
Once a Northwest suburban resident may have had to travel to Evanston, Chicago or DeKalb to get the advantages of a four-year college, but increasingly the four-year colleges are the ones doing the traveling.

In addition to Harper College in Palatine and Oakton Community College in Morton Grove, rapidly growing two-year community colleges, many four-year colleges and universities are now offering courses in and around the Northwest suburbs. And, in increasing numbers, Northwest suburban residents are taking advantage of the classes.

A press release from Northern Illinois University, describing the NIU program, states, "It's less costly in dollars, energy consumption, time, safety risks and other factors, to send one professor 50 miles to teach 50 students than it would be if 50 students traveled 50 miles to hear the same lecture." The statement, in many ways, sums up the philosophy of many college extension programs.

"EXTENSION" CLASSES from colleges are not new, of course. Many developed years ago as schools in agricultural areas formed extension programs to take news of developments in farming to farmers. What is relatively new, however, is the status being accorded to college extension programs now that large numbers of 18-to-21-year-olds are no longer flocking to colleges.

Northern Illinois University in DeKalb has the largest extension program of any of the state supported colleges, with an enrollment of 4,710 in September. Thirty-eight per cent of the extension students are from Cook County, and a substantial number of them take courses offered through Harper or High School Districts 214, 211 or 207 in the Northwest suburbs.

The most popular fields in NIU's extension program, as with those offered by many other schools, are education and business, fields which have a ready-made audience in a suburban area, according to Roslyn Randall, public information specialist at NIU. "There are some other fields that require lab work or the university's library resources that you almost have to offer on campus," she said. "But right now there are some fields where you can get a degree without going to DeKalb at all."

Among the fields in which NIU offers degree programs totally through its extension program are business (a student can receive a master's degree in business administration from NIU while attending all classes at Harper), journalism and public relations. Under a recent ruling from the Illinois Board of Higher Education, courses that are taken off-campus are no longer designated differently on transcripts than on-campus courses. "A credit is a credit," Miss Randall said.

PUBLIC COLLEGES are not the only ones to find value in taking their courses to the public. Last year DePaul University in Chicago began the "School for New Learning" with a branch in the Northwest suburbs and, just this fall the prestigious University of Chicago ventured for the first time beyond the Chicago city limits to offer courses in Evanston, Winnetka and River Forest. Next year, the Northwest suburbs may have University of Chicago courses.

The DePaul and University of Chicago programs represent very different approaches to extension programs aimed at adults. The DePaul program allows an adult to work toward a bachelor's degree by receiving credit for "life experience," by taking special courses offered by the school or by doing independent study.

Mary Durkin, director of the Park Ridge branch of the school, describes it as "goal-oriented" and based on the idea that a student should demonstrate competence in specific skills which will relate to his or her future career.

Now beginning its second year, the school has about 150 students, one-third from the Northwest suburbs, and its first graduates will go through graduation ceremonies at DePaul on Feb. 2. One of the two graduates of the school this winter is Sharrie Hildebrandt, a former member of the Elk Grove Township Dist. 60 Board of Education and coordinator of the legal technology program at Harper.

MRS. DURKIN says that in its first year, the school "has not gotten as many housewives as we anticipated. The women we are getting who are married are also working."

The school also has attracted a large number of policemen seeking a degree, she says, and many of the students have found that they qualify for state scholarships which are now available for part-time students.

The University of Chicago program, which is offering courses this term with titles like "The Wheel of Life: An Introduction to Indian Religions" and "Freedom: The Sanctity of the Individual," is anything but "goal-oriented."

"Our classes are for people who have the time to read and to pursue learning for learning's sake," Joan Cowan, assistant dean of the university's extension program, said. "Our courses are taught on a very scholarly level and are for people who want to learn and aren't particularly concerned in whether it's going to lead to a degree or help them in their profession."

The extension courses are the University of Chicago's "first venture" away from the city, Mrs. Cowan said. Until this fall, the university offered courses only at its Hyde Park campus and one location in the Chicago loop. The extension program started because "We felt we would encourage more people to take (Continued on Section 2, Page 5)

"THE FRENCH NAMED them parakeets, but they are really little parrots," explained Mary Davis. Young male budgies are smart, bold, tame easily, become affectionate and learn to talk. But breeder birds, shown here in breeder cages with nest boxes attached, remain wild and natural. The female defends the nest. The Davises keep extensive records, constantly strive to improve the strain by careful selection.

"MY NAME IS Cookie. Feed me," says the Davis' pet budgie. Cookie has come up with about 50 different phrases in his seven years of life.

Couple breed 'budgies'

Strictly for the birds

by ELEANOR RIVES

Don't look now but there's something going on in Dave and Mary's basement.

The chattering is loud, happy, constant. Flashes of gorgeous color delight the eye. The billing and cooing is soothing. And the bustling activity of a hundred little busybodies is exciting.

It's strictly for the birds, this room partitioned off from the rest of the lower level of their Prospect Heights home. For this is Dave and Mary Davis' aviary, a clean, brightly lit community of well-bred budgerigars, pronounced budJERIGars, but commonly referred to as parakeets. A pair of white doves and a pair of lovebirds are included "just for fun."

MARY DAVIS HAS just completed two years as president of the Illinois Budgerigar Society. She and Dave first became interested in budgies only seven years ago, when they purchased their pet, "Cookie," from Len Adams, an Arlington Heights bird breeder. Cookie has his own special residence in the Davises' living room, as do three small, green singing finches. Their big old dog, Mickey, accepts them all philosophically.

It didn't take long for the Davises to be stricken with bird fever. Within a few months, they began buying breeding pairs. Last year they raised about 100 birds, some bred to be tamed and sold as pets, but most intended to be sold or kept, wild and natural, as breeders. The Davises get from $15 up per budgie.

"This hobby is not really profitable as a business," said Mary. "You put quite a bit of money into cages, feed and the birds themselves. We have paid as much as $400 for one breeding pair."

MARY EXPLAINED that a young male, preferably not more than two months old — "for he has not yet developed a fear of humans" — makes the best pet. A male is more affectionate, less apt to bite and more apt to talk. A reliable breeder can determine the sex of a 2-month-old parakeet by the color of his cere — the flesh around his nostrils.

Dave partitioned off the Davis aviary, which holds a 20-foot flight for breeder hens, a 12-foot flight for breeder cocks, several smaller flights for younger birds and about 21 breeding cages for the happy parents with attached nest boxes for their tiny offspring. Dave built most of the flights.

"The chattering of 12 to 20 other parakeets is necessary to stimulate breeding," said Mary.

THE HEN LAYS eggs every other day until she has a clutch of four to 10 eggs, but not all of these are fertile. Usually a clutch yields about four chicks. The hen watches over them exclusively the first week, then the cock helps. She feeds them, according to their age, a liquid diet of regurgitated crop milk, moving gradually into solids by adding first one seed and then another. She never forgets which baby is at which stage of his diet.

When the chick is five to 10 days old, Mary bands its leg for permanent identification.

Mary is a regular (not frequent) and welcome visitor, tapping gently at the nest box so her visit does not come as a surprise, then carefully inspecting the nude little newcomers to see that they are gaining strength.

"We lost a few babies," she said. "But there are many tricks to save as many as possible."

THE ILLINOIS Budgerigar Society, made up primarily of parakeet breeders, is a unit of the national American Budgerigar Society. Both put out monthly bulletins on how to take care of one's birds, how to breed show winners, listings of approaching shows and winners of past shows.

This month's issue of the Illinois bulletin includes Mary Davis' article on "Taming and Training Your Pet Budgie."

The show season opens in late May, with a few shows during the summer, building up to fall when there is a show within a day's driving distance almost every weekend. The biggest (and noisiest) show of the year is the All-American, this year to be held Sept. 19-21 at the Holiday Inn in Rolling Meadows. As many as 100 different breeders from all over the United States exhibit from 400 to 700 birds in this annual "biggie."

Mary, as show manager is weighing the possibility of introducing a "pet" parakeet section "to stimulate budgie owners to bring their birds and learn more about the shows."

JUDGING OF BREEDER birds is based on feather condition and conformation, or bone structure. Color, so long as it's "even," is not important. There are three divisions. Breeders begin by entering the Novice level, then must win certain repeated honors before proceeding to Intermediate and then to Champion division. Winners from each division compete with each other for "best of show."

The Davises have gone the whole bird route and have more than 100 ribbons in all colors of the rainbow, 15 plaques and 40 trophies of all sizes. They made "Champion" in 1972.

They advise persons interested in budgie breeding to read a good book on the subject, such as Ernest H. Hart's "Budgerigar Handbook."

"This is primarily a man's hobby," said Mary. "But for many of us, it's a nice couple type of thing."

BARE AND HELPLESS, these baby budgies, 4 and 6 days old, will one day wear beautifully hued feathers, perhaps capture a ribbon or trophy. Parakeet eggs at center point are about as high as an ordinary marble.

Speaking of . . . Mathemagician

by KAY MARSH

Betsy B., a housewife, takes it to the supermarket to tally her grocery bill and compute unit costs. Joan D., a teacher, uses it to figure grades and compute class curves. Olivia S., a student, uses it in math and chemistry classes and to figure gas mileage. And they all use it to check bills and reconcile bank statements.

"It" in this case is the minicalculator, a handy tool that's rapidly becoming virtually a necessity in the modern household. These electronic Merlins make each of us an instant mathemagician through the medium of an add-subtract-multiply-and-divide machine that fits in the palm of the hand.

The best news about the minicalculator, however, is that prices are still coming down. The average price in 1972 was around $150 and is now around $45. It is, moreover, one of the few items slated for still lower prices in this year of galloping inflation, and spokesmen in the field predict that within the decade the price tag will be under $10 for the simpler models.

THAT DAY MAY come sooner than you think. One Canadian manufacturer introduced a $13 machine at the Consumer Electronics Show held in Chicago recently, and several manufacturers exhibited models priced in the $20-$30 range.

The minicalculators are very much a product of this decade. In fact, they owe their existence to a whole new technology which research brought to commercial maturity in 1970. About 2.5 million were sold in the U. S. and Canada in 1972. That figure went up to about 8 million in 1973, and to about 12 million in 1974.

Brain of the minicalculator is a "chip" called a MOS-LSI (for metal-oxide semiconductor/large-scale integration). A single chip, no bigger than half the size of your fingernail, contains the equivalent of thousands of transistors to perform intricate calculations. A chip today costs about $3, down from around $20 in 1970, and a minicalculator can now be assembled in between five and 10 minutes.

AS YOU PROBABLY know, minicalculators come in many models. Some work on batteries; others plug into your house current. Others do both. Until recently, the lack of a printout was a problem, but hand-held printout units are now available. Many models today have a memory unit, and several are capable of trig and log functions that make them ideal for the engineer. In fact, many specialists predict that these will soon make the slide rule virtually obsolete. It's also possible to buy, though at considerably higher prices, programmable models that offer the problem-solving capability of a small computer.

For most of us, though, the model we need is the ordinary "four-banger," a machine that will add, subtract, multiply and divide. These are the models that students are buying, in the words of one retailer, "like peanuts," and that are rapidly becoming as essential as, say, a dictionary for the college-bound. One spokesman for the mini-machines has said, "I can see kids taking them to school like pencils."

ONE OF THE LATEST uses of the minicalculators is to play games and spell words. Since most of the glowing digits resemble letters when you turn the machine upside down, it's possible to spell out a number of words and messages if you stick to the letters available. To find "BLISS," for instance, punch 441304, divide by 8 and add 15. Or find out who benefits if the price for 28,430,938 barrels of oil is increased 2.5 per cent. (The answer comes out SHELL OIL.) If you miscalculate, simply enter 7734 and the machine will swear for you. (Upside down, that spells HELL.)

So popular have calculator games become that James T. Rogers, editor of Scientific American, has produced a small book devoted to "fun and games with your pocket calculator." It's to be published this spring by Random House.

For most of us, though, the minicalculators have much more practical uses. Someone has said that these fast auxiliary brains are essential to two kinds of people: those of us who love math and working with figures, and those of us who hate math and working with figures. Whichever category you fall into, you may well calculate that spending $20 or so for a minicalculator is one of the best investments you ever made (especially with income tax time just ahead).

Jury duty a privilege for a few?

by JULIE MARTOCCIO

As a columnist, I have often wondered how effective my words might be on one occasion or another. I'm certain that every writer has enough ego to hope that someone who has become aware of his or her words — particularly if they are intended to urge toward civic duty — will take the time to let that writer know. When the subject does not affect a reader in a personal manner, the hope often dies a-borning.

That's why I had reason to feel pleased when immediately upon reading my column "Jury Duty is a Privilege," a reader took time out from her many duties to write the following:

"HAVING READ your article 'Jury Duty is a Privilege,' I do have a question. Why are the same people called time and time again when many have never been called once? I do feel jury duty is a civic service to be done but not by the same people being called. I did serve and although I found it to be educational, I was extremely nervous doing it. I would like the question answered. Thank you. — E. M.

Dear Mrs. E. M.: Since the subject is such a vital one and because space limitation prevented me from covering the subject in more detail, I am grateful to you for letting me know that it is important enough a subject for further elaboration.

As you recall, I pointed out that sometimes there are so few jurors, cases are delayed simply because there aren't enough to go around. This creates delays and — who knows what ramifications — such as witnesses changing their minds, status, moving, passing away, etc., so that a person might not get a fair trial after all.

• This situation has caused so much concern that there is a growing feeling that jury trials should be discouraged. In some states, the names of prospective jurors are drawn from the tax assessment rolls of the county. In Illinois, they are taken from voter registration lists so you can see one reason for the limited number of jurors.

• Another reason can be attributed to the fact that sometimes too great a number are excused from jury duty pleading illness, job, etc. Perhaps the answer here would be that those in charge discontinue the practice of excusing persons called. It may be that the former have been too lenient. My feelings on the matter are ambivalent. If a person is forced to become a juror, will he or she then remain objective and free of prejudice, or will those persons take out their anger on the parties involved in the case?

• A major concern, as you pointed out, is that too many of the same persons are serving on the jury. You are right, of course. Many juries are made up of citizens who can spare the time, such as those who are unemployed, housewives, retired pensioners, recipients of public aid. While they, too, certainly should be duly represented on a jury, they do not, cannot, represent a cross-section of persons within the meaning of the definition "jury — composed of one's peers."

The purpose of a jury is to have enough diverse personalities, backgrounds, interests and occupations to give the breadth and depth of understanding needed to judge the facts that come out in a trial. Where one juror may fall, there is another to complement whatever the other lacks. Not so, if all the jurors are of the same background, experience, education or lack of it.

WITHOUT TRYING to sound chauvinistic, I'd like to point out that wars have been fought and are still being fought for the privilege or right to judge and be judged by one's peers. There are downtrodden peoples all over the world who would gladly change places with those of us who may act as jurors.

It might be well for each of us to think back to ancient times when judges were appointed by kings and had only to answer to those who appointed them. Our judicial system dates back to the Magna Charta when it was designed to guarantee fairness for the common man brought to trial. It was an attempt to eliminate what came to be known as "star chamber proceedings" and in its place permit an average citizen to judge and be judged by his peers. Our U.S. and state constitutions guarantee us trial by jury in most instances, but it is up to each of us to see that we continue to enjoy that guarantee!

Siding in Wisconsin was the honeymoon choice of Patricia Koch and Tom Harris, who were married Dec. 28 in First Presbyterian Church, Arlington Heights.

Patricia, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Augustus Koch, former area residents who now reside in Pittsford, N.Y., and Tom, son of Mr. and Mrs. George A. Harris, 826 W. Patricia graduated from Southern Methodist University, Dallas, and Tom is completing his junior year in pre med at Harvard University, Cambridge. The newlyweds are living in nearby Arlington, Mass.

Patricia chose an ivory gown of silk organza and peau d'ange lace for the 4:30 p.m. candlelight, double ring service. Ivory roses, stephanotis, baby's breath and ivy made up her bridal bouquet.

HER SISTER, Mrs. Dirk Anderson, Arlington Heights, was matron of honor, and Debbie Hart and Judy Raper, Dallas, and Karen Dulla, Riverside, Ill., were bridesmaids. The girls were in royal blue jersey gowns and carried nosegays of red roses, stephanotis and baby's breath.

There's more than one way to prevent soggy piecrust

Dear Dorothy: You've helped me before so hope you can do the same now. What can I do to prevent my lemon and cream pies from having soggy crusts?

—Mary Schindler

I've been collecting tips on this very thing all my married life. Each tip came from an excellent cook and it seems to me they all work. One is to break up the white of an egg, mix it with one-quarter teaspoon of sugar, brush it on the pie bottom, let dry, then bake as usual.

Another way is to beat one egg white slightly with one teaspoon of water (so there is no foam) and brush it on the raw crust. The crust is put in the refrigerator to dry; then the filling is put in to bake.

A third way is to prebake the crust for 10 minutes, then let it dry before putting in the filling — and then bake the entire pie.

A more complicated method is to prick the raw crust, then brush the inside with one egg white beaten with a teaspoon of water. Put it in the refrigerator for 10 minutes, then into a 450-degree oven for five minutes. Then allow the crust to cool, pour in the filling and bake. If this doesn't help, come knocking at the door again.

Dear Dorothy: This is what I do to make the most out of bits of soap. I put all my leftover pieces in a jar and, when half-full, I add hot water and shake every day. When the soap turns to a jelly, I add it to my washing detergent and put in the washer with the white clothes. Volla! The clothes are clean and nice-smelling too. Also do this with my yellow laundry soap.

A Paddock review

Poor visibility hampers 'Company'

by GENIE CAMPBELL

Music On Stage might have the makings for a successful production of "Company." I'll never really know because opening night I could see only half the show... from the shoulders up.

When a community theater group invests many hours in producing a full-fledged musical, it seems a shame that all is ruined through simply ignoring what the audience could not, inability to see the performance.

If serving liquor was important enough for MOS to choose a Holiday Inn banquet room in which to stage its show, then why not also make sure the stage was raised enough for all to see? If that was impossible, the show should never have been given there in the first place.

CONSEQUENTLY, only the front row got a good look Friday night. The rest of the audience, including myself, either sat dumb, missing most of the animated action on stage, or if they cared enough, occasionally stood up.

And this is unfortunate since MOS appears to have gathered together a cast that seems ideal for the contemporary adult musical which takes a tongue-in-cheek approach to the institution of marriage.

Jim Tuverson especially looks the part of a fun-loving bachelor named Robert who is about to celebrate his 35th birthday amidst all of his married friends. They, of course, try to convince Robert that "married" is the only way to go. Only their actions don't always show it.

There are both good sides and bad sides to marriage which Robert learns quite quickly through separate visits he pays the individual wedded couples, who comprise his social circle. The amusing separate vignettes cemented together by an off-beat yet catchy musical score, are exaggerated capsules of life itself which you certainly don't have to be married to appreciate.

CAST AS ROBERT'S friends are community theater veterans Sue Louveau, Sam Ursetto, Judy Carlson, Pete Piper, B. J. and Tom Swingle, A. J. Hiegler, Jim Curren, Betty Myers and Earl Carlson.

Also appearing in the production are Barbara Curren, Donna Alpers, Donna Halper and Venus Miller.

In addition to the poor visibility, poor acoustics hampered the singing. Songs just didn't carry well. The room chosen is in fact, just too small for performing a musical, even one that has no large choruses. Those seated next to the orchestra no doubt had difficulty distinguishing the voices. Others like myself could hear director Tom Ventris bawl out his crew for making a lighting goof.

Attempting to create more intimate theatrical surroundings is not to be criticized. Pub Playhouse, now in a dinner-theater format housed in the Elk Grove Holiday Inn, has certainly succeeded. But not until the group learned its lesson the hard way. I would have hoped that other groups like MOS would wise up, too, without committing many of the same mistakes.

COMMUNITY THEATER in this area has a great difficulty lining up adequate staging facilities. I can sympathize. But it is best to first analyze the effects of moving from a high school auditorium into a club room before jumping in feet first.

I don't think anyone who appreciates good theater would mind waiting for a Bloody Mary until after the show. The only other advice I can add is... get there early enough to grab a front row seat.

"Company" is being staged again Friday and Saturday and also Feb. 7 and 8. The Holiday Inn is located close to the intersection of Milwaukee Avenue and River Road, Northbrook. Tickets, 966-4720.

22,968 nurses on duty

How many nurses are caring for the nation's veterans at Veterans Administration hospitals?

The agency's corps of registered nurses increased 7 per cent, or 1,531, during fiscal year 1974. A total of 22,968 nurses provide medical care for veterans at 171 hospitals and 212 outpatient clinics. Assisting them are 6,078 licensed practical nurses and 25,027 nursing assistants.

our courses," she said, and also because it eliminated the high rent that the university was paying for its Loop location.

RESPONSE TO THE first year of the extension program has been good, she said, and a large number of students have also become involved in another part of the extension program — the Basic Program of Liberal Education for Adults.

The basic program is a two-year program that involves students in seminars, tutorials in which individual topics are discussed in detail, "works of the mind" lectures and weekend outings designed to focus the student's attention on formal and informal discussions of intellectual topics.

Some of the readings for the first year of the program include works by Sophocles, Plato, Dostoevski, Freud and Shakespeare. The students in the basic program, Mrs. Cowan said, "average around the age of 40, may have had some college and who are interested in learning but haven't had the time or the opportunity before."

Although the closest the University of Chicago program came to the Northwest suburbs this year was Evanston and Winnetka, Cal Stockman, dean of continuing education at Harper, said he has been talking to the university about bringing the program to this area next year.

LARGE COLLEGES and universities aren't the only ones offering extension programs in the Northwest suburbs. In addition to schools such as Northeastern Illinois University and Chicago State, which also offer classes in the area, the tiny College of St. Francis in Joliet is offering courses.

One of St. Francis' special areas of continuing education, according to Arnie Good, head of the St. Francis program, is a course of study for registered nurses who want to receive their bachelor's degrees. The college offers courses, many of them at Juliette Low School in Arlington Heights, which allow the nurses to pick up at night the subjects they need for a bachelor's degree.

"Our philosophy," Good says, "is that it takes a certain amount of general education to make a well-educated person. For the nurse, the only thing between her nursing training and a regular college degree are the general education courses. We offer courses for nurses, but they aren't specialized nursing courses."

One thing nearly everyone involved in the continuing education programs, whether they are the "goal-directed" ones like DePaul's or the more general, is that the students provide an unusual experience for their teachers.

Mrs. Cowan says that many of the University of Chicago faculty "really enjoy the classes because they get a different kind of student. If you're going to teach a course in middle-age and aging, as we do, and present it to a group of undergraduate students, you'll get an entirely different response than if you present it to people who are middle-aged. We have found that the students who take our extension courses make up a very interesting class — they're very motivated."

Better TV Viewing

by Ed Landwehr

Your TV picture tube wears away so gradually that most folks don't notice the deterioration until they have the opportunity to view a newer model at a store or some friend's home. The fading process is gradual enough so you get used to it and just squint away from day to day.

Our customers at Landwehr's Home Appliances always comment on the fine picture their old TV's can still produce when video tubes are replaced. Most think it is much better than their old TV picture ever was, and this is probably true. There has been great improvements in picture quality.

Phone 255-0700 for more information about this service. We can put you back on good TV watching again.

Or, if you've been thinking about a new color TV, stop in at 1000 W. Northwest Hwy., Arlington Heights and see some of the finest. And, remember, service with sales makes your purchase worth more.

Delta is ready when you are:

It takes more than exercise to slim you down

I've just come off a successful diet, going down to 170 pounds. I'm 40, 5 feet 6 inches tall, stocky build and a college professor, which makes me somewhat sedentary in habits.

I've read your book on fitness and follow your exercise routines. I use a stationary bicycle each night to help out — about 60 minutes or so. I do extensive exercises for my abdomen.

What is the relation between breathing and exercise? At what point in the exercise is it best to breathe in and out?

When, after a meal, is it best to exercise? Also, what is the biochemistry involved here? Does one increase the usage of calories if he exercises right before a meal?

What self tests can one apply to determine the success of abdominal exercises? I've been at this for more than a year, doing most of your exercises. I have extensive fat around my waist and do not seem to be getting rid of it.

On the basis of my description would you say that a daily intake of 1,600 to 1,700 calories should stabilize my weight once I get to 160 pounds?

You may have still more weight to lose than you realize.

I don't think it makes much difference when you breathe during your exercises. Whatever is comfortable for you is all that matters. For weight training, it is usually recommended that you breathe in during the lift and out while returning the weight to the starting position. You should avoid holding your breath in deep inspiration as you might do during a chin-up. Breath holding can trigger powerful reflexes that lead to fainting or collapse in some people. You should also avoid overbreathing or breathing too fast. This induces chemical changes in the body that also lead to faintness.

Exercise before a meal if you are doing strenuous exercise. This is particularly true for heart patients, since digestion alone increases the work of the heart. Fatty foods increase the clumping tendency of the blood and decrease optimal circulatory function. Wait at least two hours after a fairly adequate meal before exercising vigorously. A good walk after a meal, in healthy people, is no strain and is often helpful. Healthy people don't need to sit or lie down for long periods after eating. You will use the same number of calories with the same task whether it is before or after the meal.

by Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

THE BEST TEST for abdominal fat is your waistline and the amount of fat under the skin. You can tighten up your abdomen with exercise but exercise won't eliminate abdominal fat.

Abdominal fat means you still have a lot of excess fat to lose, and that means more calorie restriction and continued exercise routines.

You'll have to judge yourself how many calories you need after you have eliminated all the significant fat deposits under the skin. In general eat only enough to control your weight and still have an adequate supply of energy. If you are reasonably active I would hope that might be at least 2,000 calories a day for you.

Rehabilitation center topic for meeting

A public meeting describing the treatment program of Lutheran General Hospital's 74-bed Rehabilitation Center for Alcoholism will be in the hospital's chapel-auditorium at 8 p.m., Thursday, Feb. 6. The meeting, for which there is no charge, will feature Orville McElfresh, coordinator of alcoholism treatment services.

McElfresh briefly described Lutheran General's treatment program as one designed to create a therapeutic community for the patient. This community attempts to use natural social relationships to help patients. "We try to create an environment which is immediately useful to the patient in achieving recovery and progressively useful as he or she returns to the outside community," he said.

As with many alcoholism treatment programs, education about and exposure to Alcoholics Anonymous and Al-Anon are included in the program. A unique aspect of Lutheran General's program is the use of nearly 200 AA members who volunteer to work in direct contact with alcoholism patients. Last year these volunteers worked more than 8,700 hours delivering patient care.

One of these volunteers, a former patient at the center, will recall the reactions and feelings he experienced as he went through the various aspects of treatment. The audience will have an opportunity to ask questions about the program.

Medics need sex education: report

UNITED NATIONS (UPI) — Sex education is inadequate in the medical profession and new methods are needed to properly equip young physicians, doctors and health workers, according to a report of the World Health Organization.

The report suggested showing of sex movies to students with a followup discussion to relieve their emotions.

Prepared by experts from nine countries, it deals with training for those who will have to give advice and treatment to troubled patients.

"Members of the health profession... often are ill-equipped for counseling in human sexuality, sexual behavior, family planning etc. and may be reluctant about giving such advice or unwilling to do so," the report said.

THE SKILL of a health practitioner in communicating with the patient about sexual matters, it said, "is at least as important as his knowledge of the subject." Experience in the United States in particular, it said, "shows that the major obstacle to the physician's effectiveness is his own embarrassment and discomfort."

Although the health practitioner may have been exposed to the same general cultural environment as his patient, he often comes from a different social and educational milieu and rarely shares the same inhibitions and methods of expression."

The report offered suggestions for student training, the most radical of which now is under trial in the United States. It involves, the report said, "the use of films portraying sexual behavior with unusual candor. These films show men and women engaged in such sexual activities as masturbation, heterosexual intercourse and homosexual activities."

"A NUMBER OF these films are shown, one after the other, to a group of medical students. Immediately afterward, the students are involved in group discussion in which they share their emotional reactions to the films. These usually include some degree of sexual arousal, shock, and sometimes embarrassment, disgust or hostility. By talking over these reactions together, the group soon becomes relaxed and discovers that apprehension and discomfort have vanished."

"Sometimes the students are given a second opportunity to see the films and to discover how much their anxiety levels have been lowered."

Hearing aids not covered Does Medicare pay for hearing aids?

No. Part B of Medicare, known as Medical Insurance, can help pay for a number of different medical services and supplies when they are medically necessary and ordered by your doctor. However, hearing aids, eyeglasses, false teeth, orthopedic shoes and prescription drugs are not included in the list for which payment could be made.

Avoidance play helps duck set

One of the four books that make up "Bridge Play" was called bridge from A to Z. It describes 26 kinds of bridge plays.

"A" stands for Avoidance. An avoidance play is designed to keep the dangerous opponent out of the lead.

South takes his ace of spades; leads a trump to dummy's ace and a second trump back to his king. Now if South is a hog he will try a club finesse with the idea of discarding his losing spade on a good club and making either five or six depending on where the ace of diamonds happens to be.

Unfortunately for this player East will produce the king of clubs and lead back the queen of diamonds and instead of making five or six our hog will wind up one down.

There is a simple avoidance play to insure the contract. South leads a spade to dummy's jack. West can do no better than take his queen and lead another spade. South discards a club on dummy's jack of spades; cashes the ace of clubs then leads the jack and lets it ride if East plays low. South loses one spade and two diamonds but wins the rubber.

Suppose West held the king of clubs. South would not make any overtricks, but he would still make his contract.

Calling all Packard buffs...

A pack of Packards, including one originally owned by Gen. George Patton, will be on display through Sunday in the Grand Court of the Woodfield Shopping Center, Schaumburg.

The show is sponsored by the Packards of Chicagoland Club, a regional organization of the Packards Automobile Classic Club of America. Paul Terhorst of Buffalo Grove, who owns the auto formerly used by Patton, said Packard was the automotive pioneer in engineering and style. It was one of the leading luxury cars in America until production was halted in 1958.

Other area residents whose cars will be on display are Gene Schild of Des Plaines, Dr. Robert Hattenhauer of Des Plaines and Robert Moore of Mount Prospect.

SPIFFING UP his prize possession, a Packard automobile once owned by Gen. George Patton, is Paul Terhorst of Buffalo Grove as he prepares the car for a show at Woodfield Shopping Center, Schaumburg. The show, sponsored by the Packards of Chicagoland Club, a regional organization of the Packards Automobile Classic Club, continues through Sunday.

Record 2-day trading on NYSE; Dow up 2.11

STOCKBROKERS stay on the job during lunch hour Tuesday, grabbing sandwiches at their posts to try to stay abreast of the second consecutive day of record-setting trading. In the first hour alone, 9.8-million shares were traded.

NEW YORK (UPI) — Frantic trading on the New York Stock Exchange Tuesday pushed prices higher in heavy volume that just missed matching Monday's all-time high.

When the trading day ended Tuesday, nearly 64 million shares had been bought and sold Monday and Tuesday — the two most active days in the exchange's 183-year history. Business was hectic when the opening bell sounded Tuesday at 10 a.m.

After four hours of frenzied trading that even exceeded Monday's record pace, trading slowed in the last two hours.

In all, 31,760,000 shares were traded, just 370,000 short of Monday's 183-year high of 32,130,000.

THE DOW JONES Industrial Index of blue-chip stocks rose 2.11 to 694.77, far short of the surprising gains recorded Monday when it soared 26.05 in the eighth largest gain ever.

Analysts said as many people were selling stock for quick profits Tuesday as were buying to get into what they sense is a rising market. The spurt in activity was caused, analysts said, by lower interest rates, a major court victory by IBM, in an antitrust case and a general feeling that President Ford and Congress would agree on anti-recession and energy programs.

Never before have so many shares been traded in any two-day period. Brokers and traders, in a slump since the market began to decline two years ago, were gleeful.

"It's the biggest day I've seen since I've been on the floor in 1961," said William Moxley, a floor broker for Sherson Hayden Stone. He said his firm, which had been handling about 500 orders a day, traded 1,200 Monday and more than that Tuesday.

KEVIN McNAMARA, a trader for Ratan Mosle, said most of the activity was by mutual funds and other institutions that had been "sitting on a lot of money" waiting for the market to turn around. But, he said, "People aren't really going crazy, not at all, not at all." On the exchange floor at 11 Wall Street, brokers rushed orders to and from trading posts, some shouting and others munching sandwiches brought down from the exclusive Members' Club in wicker baskets by green-liveried porters.

"I love it," said Olga Trelubets, a hurried page. All the activity, she said, "makes the time go by much faster, and I don't get as tired."

In early trading ticker tape that records transactions ran seven minutes late but by the close it was only a minute behind trading.

America's love affair with auto ending: researchers

End of an era near for 'gas guzzlers'

NEW YORK (UPI) — Americans will be driving small, electronically controlled cars by the end of the century and using new types of citywide transports serving as automated taxicabs, two researchers predicted Tuesday.

Joseph P. Coates, of Congress' Office of Technology Assessment, said the day of the big, flashy, gas-guzzling automobile is near an end. He said a shift in American values, in addition to the energy crisis, is moving people away from conspicuous consumption and toward quality, durability and convenience.

Coates said in a paper presented at the annual meeting of the American Assn. for the Advancement of Science that cars of the future must be smaller and made with better mechanical systems to cut energy consumption. And advances in technology will lead to electronic control of such things as steering, braking and carburetion.

JACK R. IRVING, an engineer for the Aerospace Corp., said families will only need one car by the year 2000 because many cities will offer personal rapid transit systems. These will differ from mass transit networks of today because the vehicles of the future will be for the private use of a traveler and his companions.

Hundreds of these small, automated transports will move seconds apart on a single elevated guideway, according to the version studied by Aerospace. With average traffic density, Irving said about 100 PRT cars would be needed for every mile of guideway.

Stations would be located every few blocks. A traveler would insert a special plastic card into electronic trip-ordering equipment and push buttons indicating where he wants to go. He then would walk to a waiting car, insert his card in a slot next to the gate to tell the transport where to stop, and would be on his way.

IRVING SAID fares of 3 to 4 cents a mile would pay for all operating costs. And he said each vehicle would use only half the energy consumed by automobiles.

"When PRT is available in our major cities, we will no longer need to go to work in congested traffic and will be able to use the time productively," Irving said.

"The poor, the young, and the old will have a new sense of freedom, and we will do much towards cleaning our urban air, saving energy and, especially, petroleum."

County to tell '75 budget plans today

Tight-lipped county officials will reveal 1975 budget plans at 10 a.m. today, only 48 hours before hearings on the proposals begin.

The budget is expected to be another hold-the-line effort to avoid a tax increase by County Board Pres. George Dunne.

Dunne refused to confirm Tuesday that the budget will include a 7.5 per cent pay increase for most county employees and will not increase taxes in 1975.

County board members were informed by telegram late Monday that Dunne's budget, which generally is completed by early January, would be presented today. THE BOARD is expected to schedule three hearings, at 10 a.m. Friday, Saturday and Sunday, before allowing 10 days of public inspection that are required by law. A final public hearing will be scheduled in mid-February with a Feb. 28 deadline for approval.

Although one Republican board member sarcastically said the weekend schedule of hearings "would make us all very happy" and promised to question the quick hearings, a board Democrat said "the votes already have been polled" to win approval of the schedule. Democrats dominate the board with 10 of 16 members.

Elected county officials, who submitted budget proposals to Dunne last fall, Tuesday said the order of appearance before the board's finance committee has not been set and denied knowledge of final department budget totals that Dunne will recommend to the board.

The Herald learned that: • Largest salary increases probably will be received by sheriff's police who have received salaries similar to Chicago police for six years. Chicago police received 8.4 to 12.4 per cent raises for 1975.

• Sheriff Richard Elrod has requested staff increases for courtroom deputies, suburban patrols, youth services aides and for the state's attorney's office.

• Assessor Thomas Tully asked for no staff increases and expects a budget increase of $309,000 to $5.6 million.

• Clerk Stanley Kusper has requested funds for a two-year microfilming and remodeling of the vital statistics department. Kusper did not seek funds for a special election to replace former Circuit Court Clerk Matthew Danaher, who died in December.

Dunne is expected to avoid increasing of real estate taxes by boosting fees for filing of legal documents in the county clerk and recorder's offices.

Maureen's more than just 'Family'

NEW YORK — Maureen Stapleton is hidden behind a water cooler in an upper West Side pastry shop. Waiters and waitresses swirl about her. They deal out menus, tote trays and bark orders. Miss Stapleton, an actress of many roles, now plays herself.

"I don't know why I act," she said in a soft, pleasant voice that was interrupted by a smoker's cough. "Somewhere . . . it starts with wanting to be somebody else. Maybe, you get to live a lot of different lives instead of being stuck with the one you have . . ."

"But the older you get, the tougher it gets. The older you get the more you like movies. You do them and go home. With a play, you need too much energy. You have to get yourself up night after night. 'Acting is the work of the young. It's too tough messing around with your insides.'"

MAUREEN Stapleton, 47, has been delving into her emotions since 1942 when she rode into New York on a bus from Troy, N.Y. She wanted to be an actress and was going to try with a $100 grub-stake.

But first, she ran a billing machine and answered phones and demonstrated radar. The money paid for drama lessons.

Her first role on Broadway was as an understudy for a production of "Playboy of the Western World." Her rise in the theater was slow and steady.

But then in one night, Miss Stapleton, still relatively unknown, did what so many women dream of. She went to bed and woke up a star. The play was Tennessee Williams' "The Rose Tattoo." And Miss Stapleton's portrayal of Serafina ranged from the eruptions of Mt. Etna to calm of Lake Placid.

AFTER THAT success, Miss Stapleton

Television in review was off and running. Her plays are many: "The Glass Menagerie," "Plaza Suite" and "Toys in the Attic."

Her movie roles are as numerous as her television performances, the next of which will be CBS' "The Queen of the Stardust Ballroom" Feb. 13.

It's a tale about a lonely, middle-aged widow who seeks love on a dance hall floor. For her role, Miss Stapleton spent hours at Myron's Ballroom in downtown Los Angeles.

Although she has had her triumphs on the stage, her personal life has had elements of tragedy. She admits she had a drinking problem. "But never when I worked."

Then, there has been her battle with her weight. She used to have Franco-American Spaghetti orgies and measured her career by the pound, "I was 150 in 'Lonely Hearts' and 170 in 'View from the Bridge' and 207 in 'Bye Bye Birdie.'"

And finally, there were her marriages, the first produced a divorce and two children — Danny and Cathy. The second ended quickly. Now, she lives alone in a brownstone on Manhattan's Upper West Side.

What are the major changes in the Illinois Crime Victims Compensation Act?

Any person related to the victim of a crime of violence, even though he was not dependent on the victim for his support, is now eligible for reimbursement of funeral and medical expenses which he paid for the victim. Another amendment authorizes the filing of claims for as little as $200.

Knights, Cards remain unbeaten in league

Mann's defensive work keys Prospect triumph

by CHARLIE DICKINSON

With 7:45 left in the fourth quarter of Hersey's 59-38 loss to unbeaten MSL South Division leader Prospect Tuesday night, Clyde Glass, the Huskies' leading scorer and fourth best point producer in the league at 18 a game, hit a jumper from the baseline.

It was his first field goal of the game. Dave Mann, the Prospect defender in charge of stopping Glass, was nowhere near the play, having been cut off by a pick.

"It was the first time he hadn't stopped Glass all night."

"We regarded Glass as a very dangerous shooter," said Prospect coach Bill Slayton. "We were aware of his talent as a scorer and we felt that if we could stop him we could pretty much take Hersey's offense away from them."

"I think Mann did an excellent job of doing just that."

Mann was responsible for dogging Glass everywhere he went and from the opening tip he did just that. Although the only time he blocked a Glass shot he was charged with a foul, Mann was superb at keeping Glass from even touching the ball.

With Mann all over Glass, Slayton's prophesy about the Hersey offense seemed to hold up. The Huskies were tentative in their handling of the ball and the Knights, especially guard Mike Quade, took advantage of the situation and rushed to a 12-4 first period lead.

"We felt Hersey was one of the teams who had a shot at upsetting us," Slayton noted. "Because they had played three really good games in a row. We were afraid they might pick this game as the one to finally put everything together."

"Quade played an excellent game. He has outstanding leadership both as a basketball player and a quarterback in football and he showed that tonight."

Quade, defended by Tom Frye, had a solid edge in size and quickness on the Huskie guard and exploited it repeatedly with drives down the lane for delf passes to his big men, Paul Wilbey, who had eight points, and Doug Bonthron, who had 15. Quade had 13 himself.

Mark Knutzel kept Hersey within halting distance of Prospect with some long range shooting in the first half. He got eight of his 10 points in the first two periods and set up Rich Madison several times in the second half, adding the Hersey forward to nine points.

Still, the key was Mann on Glass. A smooth shooter, Glass faced a 1-3-1 zone with Mann chasing to overcome his marksmanship.

"As long as Glass set up in his usual position," Slayton said, "We'd play our straight 1-3-1 zone against them."

"As soon as he moved, Mann moved with him."

Shooting unattended, Glass was one for one. With Mann in his vicinity he was zero for six.

Conant holds off Fremd for tense 55-53 league win

by ART MUGALIAN

Conant's Ed Berry came off the bench at Fremd Tuesday to spark his Cougars to a come-from-behind 55-53 basketball victory.

Conant trailed the Fremd Vikings 13-6 in the first quarter as Viking forward Tim Gross took command with seven points, including a nice inside move and a three-point play.

But 10 first-half points by Conant's John Rudzena helped keep the Cougars within striking distance. A long jumper by Mark Pellegrino and a free throw by Berry tied the game at 17-17 with 2:31

Berry took charge in the second half as the Cougars stormed to their third Mid-Suburban League win in eight games. The six-foot guard fed teammate Ron Sulaski under the basket for an easy score, and then after Pellegrino hit another jumper, Berry scored to give Conant a 30-24 lead.

Berry finished the night with 14 points, tying him with Rudzena for top scoring honors. Berry's six buckets in the second half, combined with Sulaski's eight after the intermission, offset a fine shooting performance by Fremd's Rick Kolze.

"Berry won the game for us tonight," said Conant coach Dick Redlinger. "He's capable of playing good ball."

Rudzena, the quick ball-handler, was instrumental in the Cougars' successful attempt to break the aggressive Fremd full-court press.

The Vikings, now 3-5 in the MSL, were down by eight with just five minutes to play, but they chipped at the lead, until with :15 left they were just two points behind. Gross and Jim Recher led the comeback.

When Conant's Pete Scaffidi missed a free throw with seven seconds left, Recher cleared the boards and sent an outlet pass to Kolze, who tried to hit Ken Hanks near the basket. But Sulaski shot a hand into the air and deflected the ball. Hanks recovered in time for a 15-footer, but the last-second attempt just missed tying the game.

Gross had 13 points to lead the Vikes, Kolze had 12 and Hanks 10. Pellegrino finished with nine for Conant.

Arlington rolls, 92-58, to push record to 8-0

by PAUL LOGAN

Showing that they deserve to be ranked among the top 15 teams in the Chicago-area area, the Arlington Cardinals crushed a good Elk Grove team Tuesday night at Grace Gym, 92-58.

The Grenadiers were within nine (28-17) with 5½ minutes left in the first half when the patented pressure tactics of Coach George Zigman's Cardinals turned the game into a rout.

Jerry DeSimone and Dennis Gaare led the scoring parade as Arlington outscored the visitors 20-11 to take a 48-28 halftime lead. Gaare hit five field goals and DeSimone four in that second quarter thanks in part to their team's devastating full court zone press.

After giving up 20 points directly off the press in the first half, Elk Grove suffered some more early in the third quarter with more turnovers before Zigman called off the human vacuum.

Then the fans, knowing Arlington had locked up its 15th win against just two losses and its eighth straight Mid-Suburban League victory, settled back to see the scoreboard go over the century mark. They almost got their wish.

The Cardinals scored 31 in the third quarter for a 79-47 lead. The total grew to 85-51 when the final starter left with five minutes left. But the reserves could only score two points over the final three minutes.

"They were awesome," admitted

Grove coach Bill Parmentier. "That team will frustrate anybody."

"I don't think we'll run into that many more Arlingtons. At least I hope not."

Aside from the deadly press, Arlington again displayed its tremendous balance. Five Cards finished in double figures. Gaare led the way with 18 points with DeSimone and Terry Donahue right behind with 14 each. Mike Fogel had 12, John Yeazel 11 and Greg Kolber scored nine as a sub before he was lifted for another reserve.

"I tried tonight using seven kids, mixing the combinations," said Zigman. The Arlington coach is trying to strengthen his team all the time, preparing for the showdowns (conference and state tournament) to come.

"The press got us going . . . quite a few points came in spurts. And it made them play a lot more deliberately."

Elk Grove, now 4-4 in the MSL and 11-8 over-all kept plugging despite the score. "I like our kids," said Parmentier. "They try to do the job we wanted 'em to do. They played hard."

Greg Kelley led the Grove with 17 points, including 13 in the second quarter. Joe Parmentier and Jeff Smith had eight each.

Gaare pulled down 11 of Arlington's 46 rebounds. Elk Grove had 19.

Wheeling wins but has scare

by DON FRISKE

Unfortunately for Rolling Meadows the same vehicle that carried them uphill brought them down Tuesday night at Wheeling.

The Mustangs rode Wheeling's fouls in the first three quarters, but committed some costly ones of their own in the final period.

"We weren't getting any fouls called in our benefit, but from what I saw, it was both ways the whole game," explained Ted Ecker, Wildcat coach.

In the first half, the Wildcats committed 17 fouls, sending the Mustangs to the line 26 times. Only missing three of these, the Mustangs scored 23 of their 31 first-half points on free throws. Forty-seven fouls were called in all, 29 on Wheeling.

"They kept fouling us on their end of the court, under the basket," said Ken Arneson, Mustang coach. "Because of this we didn't have the opportunity to get off many shots."

The Mustangs only managed to put up three shots from the floor in the second quarter, scoring one. They hit 17 of 18 from the line in those same minutes.

As a result, the Wildcats found themselves in foul trouble early in the game. Two starters, Ed Kruk and Steve Criss, both had three fouls by 2:34 of the opening quarter and sat out the rest of the first half.

Kruk collected his fifth foul with 6:47 left in the game, but Criss stuck around the whole game to give the Mustangs some last-quarter problems.

He did this from the same location he had been busily sending his opponents — the free throw line.

With 7:24 left in the game, the Mustangs owned a 45-43 lead. At this point, the Mustangs started to give back the Wildcats some of their fouls, and Wheeling responded from the line.

Criss hurt most of the fourth quarter, scoring 13 points, nine of these as a result of Mustang fouls.

While his teammates were getting in foul trouble, the scoring of Mike Brzuszkiewicz kept them in the game. He scored 10 in the second quarter when the Mustangs were staying ahead from the line and finished the game as the leading scorer with 18 points.

It was a foul that turned the game around, according to Arneson.

Early in the final quarter, the game was tied at 17. Brzuszkiewicz went up from five feet out, Mustang Tom Holl set himself underneath, and a foul was called. It was on Holl and the three-point play was successful to give the Wildcats a lead they were not to lose again.

"That should have been a charging call and it really hurt us," said Arneson. "It came down to the fact that the ref didn't know the rule. He told me that the defensive player can't establish his position when the offensive player is in the air and that's not so."

The game produced five scorers in double figures besides Brzuszkiewicz, Criss (15) and Keith Schildt (11) for the Wildcats, Scott Green (17, Holl (14) and John Hogan (11) for the Mustangs.

Forest View tips Palatine by four

by JIM COOK

Van McLeod lit the afterburners of Forest View's fast-break offense with 11 third-period points to help pace the Falcons to a 70-66 triumph over Palatine Tuesday night.

The lightning-quick guard finished with 20 points on the night, but it took the steady hand of teammate Mark Russo to ice the game with 46 seconds remaining when he converted a pair of decisive free throws.

Palatine, boasting a decided 43-24 edge in rebounds, had trouble cashing the crumples and the tips that frequently provided added shots on offense.

"That's one of the most physical games we've been in this year," Forest View head coach Ted Wissen sighed with relief. "They (Palatine) all go to the boards so well that every time I called timeout, I reminded our kids that the game was going to be won on the defensive boards. We got them when we needed them."

Forest View threatened to put the decision out of reach at the 5:11 mark of the final period when center Tony Donile cashed two bonus free throws, but Palatine applied full-court pressure and the deadly outside shooting of Mark Mara and Kevin McKenna quickly brought the Pirates back to a 66-66 deadlock with 1:27 to play.

But a McLeod interception and a perfect court-length feed to teammate Ken Schmidt for an easy crumple boosted the Falcons on top, 68-66 at the 1:14 mark.

In desperation, Palatine was whistled for two intentional fouls — the first of which Russo used to provide the final four-point margin.

"We got our shots again tonight," Palatine coach Ron Finrock said. "But we missed too many tips and layups. And we had our usual four-minute lapse in the third quarter where we were just standing around watching them run up a lead."

But not even Forest View's tenacious man-to-man defense could stop the baseline success of Palatine's sharpshooting combo of McKenna and Mara.

McKenna led all scorers with 21 points and Mara kicked in 18. Ken Reid contributed a dozen coming off the bench in the second quarter.

The Falcons, though complemented McLeod's 20 with 17 from Russo and 15 by Donile to remain two steps behind unbeaten Prospect with a 6-2 record in the South Division. Palatine, meanwhile, slipped to 3-5 in the North.

Buffalo Grove turns aside Schaumburg

by KEITH REINHARD

Schaumburg won the battle but lost the war at Buffalo Grove Tuesday night.

The Saxons limited sophomore scoring sensation Brian Allsmiller to the lowest point production in his high school career but still dropped a 70-55 to the Bison.

It was the fourth conference win for coach Paul Grady's hosting unit and pulled them back up to the .500 mark in the North Division. Joe Broualt's Saxons, meanwhile, are still in quest of their first loop triumph after eight tries.

Allsmiller bagged a grand total of five points, all of them in the second quarter and over half of them from the free throw line on one play. He also departed early from the contest after picking up his fifth personal but by then the verdict had been pretty much decided.

"I guess you could consider it a moral victory but that doesn't make us look any better in the win-loss column," a glum Broualt offered afterwards. "The kids did what I wanted them to on Allsmiller but they still fell way behind in the second half . . . something we can't afford to do."

In defense of Allsmiller, the 6-8 stand-out had been fighting the flu and was probably playing at less than 100 per cent effectiveness. At the same time, however, the visitors went into the game without the services of guard Bob Viviano, also sidelined by illness.

Still, the Saxons managed to break into an early lead and retain it through most of the first half. They were up 30-28 with 2:30 to go before intermission when Allsmiller hit the only one of his attempts afraid, a 10-footer from the baseline that tied things up.

Moments later a personal and a technical allowed him to plunk in three straight from the line at one time and the Bison moved on to a 37-35 midgame lead.

In the third quarter the Grove hit a spurt of nine straight and went permanently in command. Schaumburg rallied to pull within a point at the opening of the fourth quarter but Jeff Schuster hit three straight unguarded shots from the corner to ice up the win.

Saxon John Chmiel was high scorer with 17. Scott Groot had 16 to pace the winners.

Harper falters, 78-66; travels again Thursday

Mayfair unleashed an effective fast break over the final seven minutes Tuesday evening and handed Harper its fifth straight setback, 78-66.

Coach Roger Bechtold's visiting Harper Hawks pulled to within five points at the outset of the final half, but that signaled a charge by the hosts that put the decision out of reach.

Mayfair, which lost to Harper earlier this season, by two points, sparred with the Hawks in the first half Tuesday before pulling out to a 39-23 advantage at the intermission.

Both clubs featured four players in double figures with Harper's Mike Miller flipping in 23 points on nine baskets and five free throws. Miller worked effectively around the hoop in one-on-one situations in keeping the Hawks in the game.

Steve Schmidt chipped in 12 points, Steve Loughman 11 and Chris Misike 10 for Harper which now has won only one game in the new year and two overall in 1974-75.

The Hawks travel Thursday evening to play Waukegan and will return home Saturday for a 7:30 p.m. battle with Joliet on the St. Viator floor.

Meadows drops one to Hinsdale

Prospect totals season's high 141.41

by CHARLIE DICKINSON
Gymnastics Editor

Prospect's Knights moved into the upper echelon of gymnastics scores as they blew Barrington and Wheaton North out of the gym during a non-conference double dual meet with a season high 141.41 points. Barrington notched 98.61 and Wheaton North 90.58.

"We had some misses," said Prospect coach Pat Kivland, "but this is about as good as we've looked in five or six years. We've still got room for about five points of improvement, though."

The Knights were led by Doug Zahour who scored 8.65 on free ex and 8.45 on high bar, Dan Bartlett (7.16 for all-around) and Kurt Cederberg (8.65 on trampoline).

Four other MSL teams had non-conference meets over the weekend and Rolling Meadows got a look at Hinsdale Central, proud owner of the highest dual meet score of the year.

"Hinsdale" stopped Meadows, 146.72 to 123.53 as Keith Lisowski took the only Meadows event title with an 8.25 on high bar.

Two other MSL teams involved over the weekend were Arlington, victorious over Homewood-Flossmoor, 134.77 to 89.58 and Forest View who finished in the middle of a double dual meet with 87.18 points. Addison Trail topped them with 112.76 and Lane Tech trailed them at 79.92.

Arlington got a solid meet from Drew Parlee, averaging 7.22 for the all-around while the Falcons benefited most from Bob Walsh's 7.45 on trampoline.

Hoffman Estates brought up the rear in a double dual meet as they scored 61.09 to Glenbard South's 108.33 and Lake Park's 90.36. Mike Sorensen, Rick Lindow and Jim Wingate each collected fourth place finishes.

While Rolling Meadows got a glimpse of the highest scoring team, Maine East got an eyeful of Bart Conner, the state's highest scoring individual when they tangled with Niles West in an 139.86 to 128.15 dual meet loss.

Conner is starting to eclipse his best marks of last year as he hit an astounding

8.56 for all-around, including a 9.2 on the P-Bars. His best all-around average last year was 8.78 and the P-Bar score he turned in against Maine East was the equal of last year. Against Maine East he also topped last year's best in free ex (8.7), side horse (8.65) and high bar (8.65).

Maine West split a pair of dual meets over the weekend when they tripped Highland Park on Friday 103.06 to 70.55 and fell to Glenbrook South on Saturday 130.09 to 98.21.

Wheeling received a 7.3 on still rings from Dale Brumgraber and a 7.35 in free ex from Bill McGeshick towards their total of 95.01 in a double dual meet with Lake Forest and Mundelein. Mundelein won with 117.60, Lake Forest took third at 51.48.

IHSA announces gym districts

A record-tying 77 downstate and suburban schools have entered the 18th annual Illinois High School Association (IHSA) Gymnastics Meet series, according to assignments announced by Executive Secretary Harry Fitzhugh.

Defending team champion Hershey, which overcame a 12.5 point deficit in the finals last year to dethrone Hinsdale Central, opens at the Wheeling District Feb. 22. Hershey took last year's title with 189.5 points to snap a four-meet Red Devil title streak.

District meets will be held over a three day period (Feb. 20-22) at 12 sites, four sectionals will be staged over the three day period of Feb. 27-29, March 1 and the state finals will be held at Prospect High School March 7-8.

Districts involving MSL teams include: Mundelein District-Buffalo Grove; Rolling Meadows District-Rolling Meadows, Arlington, Conant, Hoffman Estates and Schaumburg; Wheeling District-Hershey, Fremd, Palatine and Wheeling; Glenbrook South District-Prospect; Niles North District-Forest View and Elk Grove.

The successful teams and individuals of the Glenbrook South and Niles North districts will advance to the Niles West sectional while teams from the Rolling Meadows, Mundelein and Wheeling districts will move on to the Buffalo Grove sectional.

Camping and Travel Show comes to Arlington Park

The Camping & Travel Show, which annually heralds the start of a new outdoor recreational year, opens Friday at Arlington Park in the world's largest indoor heated showroom.

Unlike some public shows where visitors can look but not buy, sponsor of this event, the Chicagoland Recreational Vehicle Dealers Assn., allows off-floor purchases and accepts orders for later delivery.

Vehicles — hundreds of them — for recreation, camping and travel will be on display at the 7th annual event which runs through Sunday, Feb. 9. Many 1975 models will be shown for the first time at a public exposition.

Camping accessories, backpacking equipment, tents, canoes and fishing boats are among the visitor attractions.

Fold-down tent and travel trailers, van conversion units, mini and full-size motor homes, fifth wheel and park model trailers comprise the fleet of some 300 vehicles to be displayed.

A special travel and campout section, where visitors can plan their vacations or weekend holidays, includes campground owners from Illinois and other states who will provide information on facilities in their areas.

A game room for youngsters, exhibitor souvenirs, maps of recreational and camping areas and literature on new 1975 model vehicles will all be available.

Some 65,000 visitors from six states are expected to attend the colorful exposition, according to Bill Kervin, show manager and CRVDA executive director.

"Exhibits have been designed to interest first-time camping families in enjoying the wholesome recreation," he explained. "Vehicles on display will meet any purpose and pocketbook."

With three of the top four outdoor vehicle manufacturing states located in the Midwest, Kervin said the exposition provides visitors a greater variety of choice than shows elsewhere.

Bears' future taking shape...

Bear selections

1st round — Walter Payton, Jackson State — speed, power, elusive and good receiver — running back at 5-11, 200 pounds. He is considered top running back available.
2nd round — Mike Hartenstein, Penn State, a defensive end — 6-3½, 220 pounds.
3rd round — traded to San Diego for running back Cid Edwards.

The Chicago Bears, with two draft picks and two trades Tuesday, hit the front office target to "improve our production positions."

The Bears chose a hard running half-back, Walter Payton from Jackson State, in the first round of the National Football League draft, and a defensive end, Mike Hartenstein from Penn State, in the second round.

Then they traded their own third round choice plus their seventh round choice to the Baltimore Colts for rights to tight end Greg Latta, who played last year with the Florida Blazers of the World Football League, a team coached by new Bears Coach Jack Pardee, and traded a third-round choice obtained from Los Angeles to the San Diego Chargers for running back Cid Edwards, a seven-year NFL veteran.

"WE TRIED TO improve our production positions on offense," Pardee said. General Manager Jim Finks added, "We feel that to date we have upgraded the football club."

"Payton is a good blocker and pass receiver as well as a good runner," Pardee said, "and projecting Latta as a tight end against tight ends coming out of college, I don't see any one coming out in his class."

Finks said that while the Bears have talked to Latta, he cannot be signed until NFL Comr. Pete Rozelle lifts a ban on signing WFL players. "His WFL contract has been breached," Finks said, referring to the fact that the Florida Blazers players were not paid for the last half of the season.

No immediate action planned

Palwaukee fails FAA runway-design rules

by STEVE FORSYTH

Palwaukee Airport near Wheeling apparently fails to meet several Federal Aviation Administration standards for runway design, a congressional subcommittee studying air traffic safety has found.

U.S. Rep. Jack Brooks, D-Tex., chairman of the government activities subcommittee of the House Committee on Government Operations, said, "If the facts presented are accurate, Palwaukee apparently does not meet several FAA regulations contained in Part 77, Code of Federal Regulations."

Brooks said FAA officials have told him the standards in question are not a threat to air safety, and they plan no immediate action to make Palwaukee comply with the regulations.

In a letter to William Rogers, chairman of Wheeling's Palwaukee Steering Committee, Brooks said the airport "does not appear to have established the required surface distances at the end of Runway 34-18, does not have 500 or 1,000-foot primary surface widths paralleling the central line of the runway at certain locations, and does not appear to have the threshold lights located the proper distances from the edges of Palatine, Wolf and Illinz roads."

BROOKS SAID his conclusions were drawn after a review of information supplied by Rogers' committee and a discussion with FAA officials in Washington, D.C.

"It is 'FAA's position that these standards are not mandatory, but simply recommended guidelines," Brooks said.

A recent transportation study approved by the Northeastern Illinois Planning Commission mentioned that several million dollars in improvements would have to be made at Palwaukee to meet federal standards if it were to be converted to a municipal airport, as recommended in the plan.

"FAA also takes the position that it has no authority to regulate the length of the runway or established aircraft weight limitations at privately owned airports," Brooks said. He recommended to Rogers that the local authorities seek enforcement of the conditions in the zoning permit.

"It is suggested that you attempt to establish the fact that Runway 34-18 exceeds the length and weight limits prescribed by the Cook County Zoning Board," he said. "It is my understanding that FAA would not attempt to prevent a state or local authority from enforcing the zoning permit."

THE COUNTY, in a joint suit with Wheeling, recently lost an appeal to control the size and weight of airplanes landing at Palwaukee. After the Illinois Appellate Court decision in September 1974, a request was sent to the Illinois Supreme Court to hear the case. The Supreme Court has not yet answered the request, Rogers said.

The Appellate Court panel of three judges said the right to regulate the weight of aircraft is under the jurisdiction of the FAA, and not the county or village. The county maintains it had control because of zoning agreements made when the airport runways were built and extended.

Rogers said the court has said the authority to control use of the airport is in the jurisdiction of the FAA, but the FAA has declined any authority except to control air traffic and traffic patterns.

"If the FAA doesn't have the authority, the county should have it," Rogers said. He said the issue may be heard by the Supreme Court because it could affect the operations of more than 300 airports in Illinois. Rogers says counties control airports in most areas of the state.

Rogers and other village residents have complained about low-flying planes approaching the airport over Wheeling, including one glide path that extends

Bieber's prison sentence to end in late February

William Bieber, former Wheeling building director who pleaded guilty last year to federal extortion, perjury and tax charges, will end his prison sentence in late February, The Herald learned Tuesday.

Bieber was released Jan. 17 from federal prison in Springfield, Mo., and is at the Community Correction Center, 825 S. Wabash, Chicago.

Bieber was sentenced to a year in prison and began his sentence July 18. He was denied parole Oct. 1.

Robert Thompson, center director, Tuesday confirmed Bieber's move to Chicago. "He is in a transitional program that is designed to prepare him for his release."

The program allows Bieber to work outside the center and to eat dinner with his family on weekdays. Bieber returns to the center weeknights, but spends allowed weekends at home.

"The idea is to reestablish him in work and family settings," Thompson said.

Bieber received a Christmas furlough from federal prison in December and his attorney, David Schippers, has attempted to win Bieber's release from prison because "he has been very sick." Bieber reportedly injured his back in a 1973 auto accident.

Although six former Wheeling and Cook County officials were indicted for the shakedowns of builders in the Wheeling area, only Bieber and James Stavros, former Wheeling Township Democratic committeeman, were sentenced to prison. Stavros is serving a four-year sentence at the federal correctional institution at Lexington, Ky.

List of building improvements to be studied

A "very rough" list of building improvements, which could cost about $24 million, will be presented tonight by a High School Dist. 214 citizens' committee.

The 40-member committee will meet at 8 p.m. in the district administration center, 799 W. Kensington Rd., Mount Prospect.

James Stoll, committee chairman, said Tuesday the rough cost estimate for the massive list of improvements proposed for the district's eight schools, was "subject to professional refinement" and was not final.

Stoll estimated that half of the total cost involved would go into major improvements and renovation at the district's oldest schools, Forest View and Arlington.

Stoll said the committee will decide tonight whether to request professional help for estimating costs of proposed additions and improvements.

The committee has been working for the past several months, touring buildings to assess needs and getting cost estimates for improvements that range from fieldhouses and swimming pools to greenhouses and additional classroom space.

The committee has not worked out how the proposed improvements will be financed.

Stick out your tongue and say "ah" like a good girl.

by TONI GINETTI

Being a guinea pig for science may be valuable for mankind, but it's not much of a way to spend a second birthday.

Little Kristen Schweitzer of Hoffman Estates had put up with getting her hair trimmed and saying "ah" for the girl who dabbed a cotton swab in her throat. But when the woman neared with the needle to draw blood, Kristen had had about enough.

And when a lower lip starts quivering, you don't tell a 2-year-old to be a good girl because she's helping to determine if living near a sewage-treatment plant will be harmful to her health someday.

For Kristen, her three sisters and parents and 200 other persons living in Schaumburg, Hoffman Estates, Rolling Meadows, Elk Grove Village, Itasca and Roselle, these test results will determine if the operation of the John E. Egan Water Reclamation Plant in Schaumburg may cause health problems to those living near it.

A lock of Kristen Schweitzer's hair comes off Friday.

Plant's side effects being tested on 220

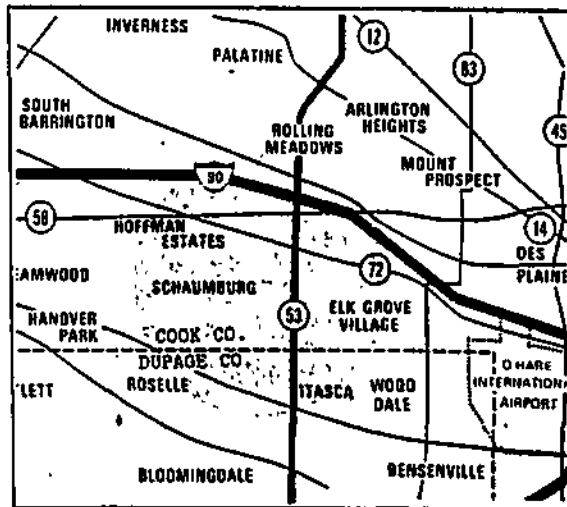

Tests to determine if local residents will be affected by the operation of the John E. Egan Water Reclamation Plant in Schaumburg are being conducted on 220 persons. The residents all live within a two-mile radius of the new filtration plant, between Meacham Road and Ill. Rte. 53 south of Schaumburg Road.

The $43 million plant will open this spring to provide sewage treatment for more than 160,000 persons living in parts of Schaumburg, Palatine and Elk Grove townships. It will be the world's largest tertiary treatment plant with a capacity of 30 million gallons per day.

The tests under way have been commissioned by the federal Environmental Protection Agency to determine if the aeration process that will be used at the plant for waste filtration can produce harmful side effects to nearby residents.

Samples of blood, hair, human waste and saliva as well as soil and water samples from the area will be taken at four different times, twice before the plant opens and twice after it opens.

Volunteers participating in the testing are being paid. The first testing was completed in October and the second was finished Friday. The final two tests will be conducted in October and next January after the plant is operating.

IF THE NOTES not there, improvise! These words of advice came from conductor Renee Gladstone, who started the Wheeling-Buffalo Grove Dist. 21 Community Orchestra. Under her prodding and patience the group is growing stronger as members look to the day when they can reach a point of perfection — a concert.

Music's their bag

Community band ad libs, struggles...and has fun

by JUDY JOBBITT

The future Philharmonic may not be, but what they lack in talent for the moment they make up for in spirit many times over.

An odd array of instrumentalists meets every Monday night at Cooper Junior High School in Buffalo Grove to play in a community orchestra.

Attendance is irregular with some essential instruments missing — like a string section — but the group is growing and finding once someone is drawn into the group, he can't stop coming.

"It's contagious," said flute player Joan Abrahamson. "It's the high point of my week."

A teacher in Rolling Meadows Dist. 15, she found out about the orchestra through a flyer her son brought home from school. A teacher and fellow flute player in Wheeling-Buffalo Grove Dist. 21 encouraged her to come, and she couldn't resist the calling, she said.

Although it was 15 years since she played in a group, the attraction was there.

No one belittles the floundering player who dusted off that instrument that hasn't been used since the homecoming game senior year. Talented performers also are in attendance to give the group balance.

IN A TRUE SENSE, they got together and "jam" with hopes that future practice and work will produce those clean, clear sounds they played in the past.

This week the group had a percussion section for the first time. During a Tchaikovsky piece director Renee Gladstone called out "Where's the bells?"

"Can't play 'em," came the response. "They don't have the notes on them. Can I play it on the chimes?"

The percussion section had its share of problems that night — like when everyone else was still working on the Tchaikovsky but they had moved on to the Mozart piece.

LATER IN the rehearsal Miss Gladstone called out to a section, "You should have a note there."

"Nope."

"Then we'll improvise," she said. "Play 'C.'"

The idea for a community orchestra had been in Miss Gladstone's mind for some time, she said. Last fall with the formation of Dist. 21 Self-Renewal Center, she received the encouragement and support to start it. The Renewal Center is a federally-funded program to discover and use community resources for the school district and community.

Through the center, she received funds to purchase music that also will be used in the district where Miss Gladstone is an orchestra teacher.

The group has hopes for performing in the future, but right now it is busy recruiting members.

THE STRING section currently consists of one violin, one viola and one cello. The rest of the group Monday included two tubas, three flutes and clarinets, one piano player, two French horns, one trumpet and two percussionists. Usually an oboe player and two saxophone players also come.

Although the orchestra is unorthodox and the talents varied, Miss Gladstone has hopes for the group. Her philosophy is that a community orchestra is needed in this area and it had to start somewhere. Now that it's started, it's just a matter of time until it grows, she believes.

Until then, some parts will be missing, or a clarinet may double as a violin to fill the gaps. But these problems don't dampen the spirits, which is what an instrumental group is all about.

AS MRS. ABRAHAMSON said, "We all probably played in music groups when we were kids. We got our incentive to play from the group. When you play at home alone it's not the same."

"Now we have a group again and can have fun. It's like being a kid again."

The community orchestra is beckoning all instrumentalists with a Monday night free to come and play. The baton drops at 7:30 p.m. for an hour and a half of long-hair, free-flowing and fun music.

BACK TO MUSIC after years away, the orchestra is the "high point" of her week. Joan Abrahamson concentrates on her part during rehearsal. She said

Village board rejects Rob Roy project

The Mount Prospect Village Board Tuesday night in effect rejected plans to build 2,350 apartment units on the 200-acre Rob Roy Golf Course.

The board voted 4-3 to reopen negotiations with the developer, Kenroy Inc., Skokie. However, because the vote fell one short of the five favorable votes that would be needed to approve the project, the decision signaled the end — at least temporarily — of Kenroy's efforts to develop the golf course in Mount Prospect.

Kenroy officials have said they would seek county zoning for the development.

THE CAPACITY AUDIENCE cheered when the final vote was announced.

Trustee O. T. Gustus cast the deciding vote, charging that the northeast section of the village could not stand the density of the proposed project.

"It's like setting a whole new city in the middle of a single-family area," he said. "I could not live with the density."

Others voting against the project were trustees Richard N. Hendricks and George B. Anderson. Both had previously announced their opposition to the development.

AFTER THE VOTE, residents rushed to the front of the room to shake Gustus' hands. Many promised to vote for him in the April village election.

"I voted it because I believed it," Gustus told the residents.

Kenroy's Roy Gottlieb, however, said the residents would regret the vote. "It is my opinion that the people who are in favor of open space lost on that vote," he said.

Gottlieb had said earlier that Kenroy would seek county zoning for 4,500 units if turned down by the village. Under the defeated proposal, only 2,350 units would have been built allowing the River Trails Park District to purchase the 18-hole golf course for open space.

The golf course is east of Wheeling Road between Euclid Avenue and Camp McDonald Road.

McHenry Road protesters send state 'alarming' report

by BETTY LEE

Members of CORPSE (Citizens of Old McHenry Road Proposing Slaughter Elimination) have sent a report of "alarming" traffic statistics to the Illinois Dept. of Transportation in hopes of convincing officials of the need for traffic control on McHenry Road.

The report, which cited all accidents occurring between December 1973 and December 1974 on McHenry Road, is the latest attempt by CORPSE to get the 50-m.p.h. speed limit reduced to 40 m.p.h. and traffic lights installed on that stretch.

The study disclosed that 92 accidents occurred on McHenry Road, including a fatal last March. A summary shows that:

- Most accidents occurred on Sundays, (20), followed by Saturdays (16). The number of accidents was the same Tuesdays, Wednesdays and Thursdays (13) of that year, with the least number of accidents occurring Mondays (10).
- Most accidents occurred at night.
- 169 cars were involved, causing an estimated $40,715 in property damage. Ten of the cars were destroyed.
- The average property damage for each accident excluding the destroyed cars was about $442.
- Of the 92 accidents, 21.7 per cent resulted in injury. There was one death.
- About a third of the accidents were caused by speeding.

The report also cited that about a third of the accidents stemmed from the drivers making turns off McHenry Road. "It just points out that something has to be done," said Karen Williams, CORPSE member.

THE CITIZENS' group has been told by state officials that traffic signals may be installed when the state makes budget considerations, Mrs. Williams said.

"This is not the kind of situation that can wait for a budget," she said. "You don't know every time you pull out of the driveway if you are going to make it."

The study and a letter was directed to Langhorne M. Bond, secretary of the department of transportation. "He knows about CORPSE and about me," Mrs. Williams said. "We hope we'll get a direct response."

The report will augment efforts made by State Sen. Bradley M. Glass, R-Northfield, in behalf of CORPSE. Glass is investigating the red tape involved in solving traffic problems.

FORTY ACCIDENTS occurred on McHenry Road since CORPSE asked for traffic signals and speed limit reductions in July, Mrs. Williams said. Those accidents could have been averted if the state reacted to solve the problem, she added.

"We're trying to buck red tape," she said. "There's no doubt about it."

In the letter to Bond, Mrs. Williams wrote: "I hope you find the enclosed report statistics as alarming and of such serious implication of need for traffic control as we do. This data only enforces the necessity for immediate action by your department."

Mrs. Williams said she is hopeful that state officials will listen. She said the group has the backing of citizens who live along McHenry Road.

CORPSE's next step will be to investigate the effectiveness of radar signs posted on McHenry Road. The signs were installed to warn travelers to slow down, a move made by village officials after hearing pleas made by CORPSE members.

CORPSE also will check the number of speeding citations issued on the road.

Village studies single scavenger-service plan

A proposal to contract with a single scavenger for garbage pickup service in Wheeling is being studied by village officials.

Trustee Albert Lang asked for the study Monday night, saying such an arrangement may give the village more control over service than it has under the present system requiring residents to hire one of four village-approved scavengers.

Under the system envisioned by Lang, the village would sign a contract with the scavenger service and then the village would collect the necessary monies to pay for the service either through a garbage tax or an added service charge.

"As long as we have the authority, let's look into it," Lang said. He said he is not proposing a new system be adopted, at least not until a study of the situations in neighboring communities is completed.

Village Mgr. George Passolt will prepare the study.

IN MOST NEARBY communities the village contracts for scavenger service.

In Buffalo Grove, the village bills scavenger service users. For Mount Prospect residents, a portion of their property taxes is used to pay for the service. Arlington Heights residents are billed directly by the village-chartered scavenger.

It is not known whether a change in the operation of scavenger service would affect garbage-pickup rates. If a new system is adopted, sealed bids would be sought for the scavenger contract, Lang said.

"This seems a good way to limit the people (scavengers) knocking on our door and saying let us in or we'll sue," Lang said. "I'm getting a little tired of being threatened."

Last October, Top Disposal Service, Elmhurst, said it might file a lawsuit against Wheeling because the village refused to issue the company a license to pick up refuse in the village. The company sought the license because one of its commercial customers recently relocated to Wheeling and it wanted to continue to serve the customer.

A VILLAGE ORDINANCE limits the number of scavenger licenses to four. They are held by Arc Disposal Co. Inc., Rosemont; Wheeling Disposal Inc.; Buffalo Grove Disposal Inc.; and Rylon Disposal Inc., Chicago.

Village Pres. Ted C. Scanlon was skeptical of any change even before the board agreed to have the study made. "I for one am dead against the village acting as a bookkeeper" for the scavenger company, he said.

Scanlon said the scavenger services have asked the village to collect the fees in the past because of slow payments.

directly over Holmes Junior High School, 221 S. Wolf Rd., Wheeling.

ROGERS SAID the extension of Runway 34-16 in 1963 was endorsed by the FAA at a hearing before the County Zoning Board, and he charges the FAA knew the extension would violate FAA regulations and guidelines. He said the FAA also changed the landing pattern on the runway so it passed over Holmes school, although the county agreement required approaches over the forest preserve areas.

Installation of new instruments for landings caused lowering of the glide slope, Rogers said, although an FAA spokesman said no glide slope angle has been established for the runway yet.

Brooks said the complaint that planes fly less than 100 feet over the school is true, but he said that happens in several locations throughout the country.

"I share your concern about FAA's lack of emphasis with regard to safety and health of people on the ground," he said. "The rationale seems to be simply that air safety will enhance the safety of people on the ground."

BECAUSE HIS committee is charged primarily with overseeing government operations, Brooks said, "I am again bringing the Palwaukee situation to the personal attention of the administrator of the FAA. Hopefully he will take action to alleviate your concern."

Rogers said his committee recommended no specific action to the village board because of the pending request before the Supreme Court. He said his concern is the safety of those around the airport, and he feels the FAA regulations in use at Midway Airport in Chicago, if applied to Palwaukee, would offer that protection.

Rogers has battled the airport issue for years, contending that threshold lights are too close to the ends of the property. He says the lights should be moved several hundred feet down the runway to coincide with the approved glide slope. Airport owner George Priester has said the threshold lights are considered "displaced lights" and are not part of the normal operating system of the runway.

Correction

The date of the Prospect Heights Park Board election was incorrectly listed in Tuesday's Herald. The correct date is April 1.

Two incumbents and five newcomers are seeking the two available terms.

Council upset over parking tiff

Behrel aide request may face opposition

by STEVE BROWN

A proposal to hire an administrative assistant for Des Plaines Mayor Herbert H. Behrel could run into trouble when it is reviewed by the city council next month.

Behrel said Tuesday he has written to members of the city council asking them to consider creating the position of administrative assistant.

While the mayor declined to elaborate on the details of the proposal, it reportedly contains the suggestion that funds to hire the new aide be included in the 1975 budget which is now being prepared.

SEVERAL MEMBERS of the city council have indicated the proposal could run into trouble because of a recent squabble between the mayor and some aldermen over the failure to complete a recommendation for parking facilities for the new city hall.

The mayor's letter also suggests that office space be allocated on the sixth floor of the new city hall for the assistant.

It is expected the proposal will go to the city council's city code and judiciary committee for study. Behrel said no decision has been made as to how much an assistant might be paid. He said that he has been looking at pay scales for assistant village managers in other communities in order to get some idea of what types of salaries are being paid.

BEHREL CHARGED several weeks ago that the council had been vacillating over the issue of settling the parking lot question. Some aldermen had suggested that part of the problem might be a lack of administrative homework being done by some city departments.

The city council recently voted down a move to create the position of city manager once Behrel leaves office in 1977.

At the time, the mayor said he was not opposed to such a move, but stated that he still favored the retention of a full-time mayor. A salary for an administrative assistant had been included in the budget several years ago, but the mayor did not hire anyone, because he said there was no office space available.

The mayor said recently that an assistant might be needed now to aid in the operation of the various city departments and to attend various meetings, both in and outside of the city, the mayor is asked to attend.

Volunteers needed to help compile history of city

The Des Plaines Bicentennial Commission is seeking volunteers to help compile a book on the history of the city to be completed in time for the celebration of the nation's 200th birthday.

The project was discussed at a meeting of the panel Tuesday night. David Wolf, commission chairman, said the book on the city's history could serve as a lasting commemorative of the city's celebration of the Bicentennial.

James H. Williams, chairman of the commission's heritage committee, however, said it would be unrealistic to think such a project could be undertaken and completed by July 1978 unless it is done on a full-time basis.

"It can't be done with occasional interest with someone working one hour one day and one hour the next," Williams said. "You have to have people who will be dedicated to do it."

WOLF SUGGESTED contacting college students who may be interested in doing the project, possibly for school credit. He added that there may also be persons in the community with research-gathering ability who would agree to work on the project.

Williams, a member of the Des Plaines

Historical Society, said his group would be interested in doing the project on its own, but does not have the manpower required.

Wolf and Williams said they would meet and continue to discuss the project in an effort to track down persons who could spend the time needed on such a project.

Wolf also reported at the meeting that plans to invite American Indians to the city to conduct an annual Indian powwow as part of the city's bicentennial festivities are fading.

WOLF SAID THE Indians conduct a gathering each year at various locations throughout the country. Wolf said he has been in touch with officials from Maine West High School to see if the school would be available for such an event, but as yet no written communication has come from the school board.

Wolf said the project is not dead and he will continue to pursue efforts to bring about the Indian festivity in the city.

Negotiations also are under way with several Explorer posts in the city to create an authentic Indian village at Big Bend Lake as part of a commission Bicentennial project, Wolf said.

Cafe employe confesses to burglary

An employe of the Ground Round Restaurant, 444 River Rd., Des Plaines has confessed to stealing more than $1,000 from the restaurant Sunday morning, police said.

Police said Tuesday that Abner L. Shapiro, 49, of 6161 Winthrop Ave., Chicago, admitted to the theft after being questioned by police.

Shapiro was seen leaving the restaurant when police arrived at about 8:30 a.m. He told police he was at the restaurant to pick up a daily report sheet he needed to use at a meeting that day at another restaurant.

Shapiro accompanied police into the restaurant through the unlocked front door where they met assistant manager Wendell Bakke. Bakke gave Shapiro the report sheet and Shapiro left, police said. Bakke told police that when he arrived at the restaurant, he found the front door unlocked and the safe open and heard footsteps in the building.

Bakke also told police there was only one car in the area at the time of the incident and the description matched the auto Shapiro was entering when police arrived.

SHAPIRO HAD access to keys to the restaurant and he knew the safe combination, Bakke told police. When Shapiro was called to return to the scene and told of the circumstances, he admitted taking the money, police said.

Police said the safe was opened with the combination but then damaged to make it appear that it had been opened by force.

Shapiro told police he used part of the stolen $1,637.65 to pay a debt. Another $825 of the amount which was at Shapiro's home was returned to police. Shapiro was charged with burglary and criminal damage to property. Bond was set at $2,000 and Shapiro is scheduled to appear March 6 in the Des Plaines branch of Circuit Court.

Rifle-team members trophy winners

Three members of the Des Plaines Police Boys Club rifle team were recently honored for their marksmanship in shooting competition.

David Reed, Mike Francis and Ron Stocher placed first, second and third in the competition for trophies. The match, conducted regularly during the year, consists of firing a rifle in four positions, prone, sitting, kneeling and offhand. Boys must compete in the match at least five times during the year.

Sewage plant's effects probed

by TONI GINETTI

Being a guinea pig for science may be valuable for mankind, but it's not much of a way to spend a second birthday.

Little Kristen Schweitzer of Hoffman Estates had put up with getting her hair trimmed and saying "ah" for the girl who dabbed a cotton swab in her throat. But when the woman neared with the needle to draw blood, Kristen had had about enough.

And when a lower lip starts quivering, you don't tell a 2-year-old to be a good girl because she's helping to determine if living near a sewage-treatment plant will be harmful to her health someday.

For Kristen, her three sisters and parents and 200 other persons living in Schaumburg, Hoffman Estates, Rolling Meadows, Elk Grove Village, Itasca and Roselle, these test results will determine if the operation of the John E. Egan Water Reclamation Plant in Schaumburg may cause health problems to those living near it.

Plant's side effects being tested on 220

Tests to determine if local residents will be affected by the operation of the John E. Egan Water Reclamation Plant in Schaumburg are being conducted on 220 persons. The residents all live within a two-mile radius of the new filtration plant, between Meacham Road and Ill. Rte. 53 south of Schaumburg Road.

The $43 million plant will open this spring to provide sewage treatment for more than 180,000 persons living in parts of Schaumburg, Palatine and Elk Grove townships. It will be the world's largest tertiary treatment plant with a capacity of 30 million gallons per day.

The tests under way have been commissioned by the federal Environmental Protection Agency to determine if the aeration process that will be used at the plant for waste filtration can produce harmful side effects to nearby residents.

Samples of blood, hair, human waste and saliva as well as soil and water samples from the area will be taken at four different times, twice before the plant opens and twice after it opens.

Volunteers participating in the testing are being paid.

The first testing was completed in October and the second was finished Friday. The final two tests will be conducted in October and next January after the plant is operating.

Dist. 207 wrapupSchools adopt new calendar for 1975-76

The Maine Township High School Dist. 207 board has adopted a calendar calling for the school year to begin between Sept. 27 and close between June 15 and 22.

The calendar, approved by the board Monday, will be in effect through 1980. Under the calendar, school would start after Labor Day. In previous years, the start of school has varied.

The calendar policy also provides for a two-week Christmas vacation period and a spring holiday of five school days beginning the last Monday in March. Other legal holidays would be Labor Day, the first Monday in September; Columbus Day, first Monday in October; Veterans' Day, Nov. 11; Lincoln's Birthday, Feb. 12, Good Friday, and Memorial Day, May 30.

Thanksgiving will be observed the fourth Thursday in November. School will close the Wednesday before Thanksgiving Day and will resume the following Monday.

The calendar goes into effect at the beginning of the 1975-76 school year.

Nominating petitions for the April 12 school board election may be filed at the Dist. 207 Administration Center from Feb. 26 through March 21.

Petitions may be filed at the center, 1131 S. Dee Rd., Park Ridge, on school days from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. Every candidate must file a statement of economic interest with the county clerk.

Applications for absentee ballots must be filed by mail by April 7 and in person by April 9.

The terms of board members Robert C. Claus and Robert S. Stavrakas expire April 12. Claus said he will not run for reelection. Stavrakas has not announced his plans.

Addition still behind

Construction on the $8.5 million addition at Maine North High School is still behind schedule.

A representative of Construction Management Inc. told board members Monday the addition may still be finished by September despite delays caused by bad weather and a cement truckdrivers' strike.

Wed teachers can work at same school

by BOB GALLAS

The High School Dist. 214 Board of Education has reversed its policy of prohibiting married teachers from working at the same school.

The board's action came Monday night as a result of a meeting between attorneys for the teachers' union and the school board.

School attorneys changed their earlier opinion that the board had the right to separate teachers who marry because they said it could affect their performance as educators. The new opinion states that the board is required to prove teacher performance is negatively affected by marriage to separate the teachers.

THE BOARD ACTION apparently was prompted by an appeal of the policy by two district teachers who were transferred after they married. William and Judith Hastert married while working at John Hersey High School, Arlington Heights. Hastert was transferred to Rolling Meadows High School.

Hastert said Tuesday he was pleased by the policy change but was not sure he would transfer back to Hersey immediately because other personnel shifts would result if he did.

"I will go back sometime," said Hastert, who taught at Hersey with Mrs. Hastert for five years before they were married. The Hasterts are the only couple immediately affected by the

Building improvements to be studied

A "very rough" list of building improvements, which could cost about $24 million, will be presented tonight by a High School Dist. 214 citizens' committee.

The 40-member committee will meet at 8 p.m. in the district administration center, 799 W. Kensington Rd., Mount Prospect.

James Stoll, committee chairman, said Tuesday the rough cost estimate for the massive list of improvements proposed for the district's eight schools, was "subject to professional refinement" and was not final.

Stoll estimated that half of the total cost involved would go into major improvements and renovation at the district's oldest schools, Forest View and Arlington.

Stoll said the committee will decide tonight whether to request professional help for estimating costs of proposed additions and improvements.

The committee has been working for the past several months, touring buildings to assess needs and getting cost estimates for improvements that range from fieldhouses and swimming pools to greenhouses and additional classroom space.

The committee has not worked out how the proposed improvements will be financed.

change, although several couples married during Christmas vacation would have been transferred soon had the policy not been changed.

GRANT AHLBERG, teacher union head, said there was a chance of legal action by the association if the policy had not been changed.

"Our lawyer had investigated and researched the legal possibilities," Ahlberg said. "We were reluctant to pursue that sort of action with this type of situation, something that open communication can solve."

Ahlberg said he was satisfied with the policy, which he called "a fair and reasonable policy which meets human needs and in no way interferes with the job performance of the individuals involved."

Rosemary Argus to head ballot

Incumbent Rosemary Argus will head the Mount Prospect Park District's ballot in the April 1 board election.

Parks set golf rates

The Mount Prospect Park District has set golf rates for season passes to the Mount Prospect golf course.

Rates for season passes are $130 for adults 18 and older, effective seven days a week, and $100 for adults, effective Saturdays, Sundays and holidays after 1 p.m. Juniors aged 14 to 17, will pay $60 for a pass which will be effective Saturdays, Sundays and holidays after 3:30 p.m. only, unless accompanied by parent.

Twelve- and 13-year-olds can purchase a pass for $45 which will allow them to tee-off Mondays from 7 to 10 a.m. without an accompanying adult. All other hours are the same as Juniors, but the youngster must be with a playing adult.

Senior citizens can play after 1 p.m. Saturdays, Sundays and holidays and pay $45 for their pass.

The rate information was incorrectly printed in Tuesday's Herald.

Although Richard P. Coleman and William Hickey were the first to turn in nominating petitions for the election, both had to refile their petitions because they failed to specify whether they were seeking four- or six-year terms.

Park Pres. Robert T. Jackson said the park district might be letting itself in for a lawsuit if it did not strictly follow the order of filing in preparing the ballot. He said that losers in the election might charge that preparation of the ballot cost them their victory.

Both Coleman and Hickey join Theodore Pandak, former Mount Prospect zoning board member, in challenging incumbents Rosemary Argus and William Selep. Selep's name will be second on the ballot, followed by Pandak, Hickey and Coleman.

Victor Rose is the only candidate who has filed for the four-year seat which was vacated with the death of Roland C. Becker.

No immediate action plannedPalwaukee found to fail runway-design standards

by STEVE FORSYTH

Palwaukee Airport near Wheeling apparently fails to meet several Federal Aviation Administration standards for runway design, a congressional subcommittee studying air traffic safety has found.

U.S. Rep. Jack Brooks, D-Tex., chairman of the government activities subcommittee of the House Committee on Government Operations, said, "If the facts presented are accurate, Palwaukee apparently does not meet several FAA regulations contained in Part 77, Code of Federal Regulations."

Brooks said FAA officials have told him the standards in question are not a threat to air safety, and they plan no immediate action to make Palwaukee comply with the regulations.

In a letter to William Rogers, chairman of Wheeling's Palwaukee Steering Committee, Brooks said the airport "does not appear to have established the required surface distances at the end of Runway 34-16, does not have 500 or 1,000-foot primary surface widths paralleling the central line of the runway at certain locations, and does not appear to have the threshold lights located the proper distances from the edges of Palatine, Wolf and Hintz roads."

BROOKS SAID his conclusions were drawn after a review of information supplied by Rogers' committee and a discussion with FAA officials in Washington, D.C.

"It is 'FAA's position that these standards are not mandatory, but simply recommended guidelines,'" Brooks said.

A recent transportation study approved by the Northeastern Illinois Planning Commission mentioned that several million dollars in improvements would have to be made at Palwaukee to meet federal standards if it were to be converted to a municipal airport, as recommended in the plan.

"FAA also takes the position that it has no authority to regulate the length of the runway or established aircraft weight limitations at privately owned airports," Brooks said. He recommended to Rogers that the local authorities seek enforcement of the conditions in the zoning permit.

"It is suggested that you attempt to establish the fact that Runway 34-16 exceeds the length and weight limits prescribed by the Cook County Zoning Board," he said. "It is my understanding that FAA would not attempt to prevent a state or local authority from enforcing the zoning permit."

THE COUNTY, in a joint suit with Wheeling, recently lost an appeal to control the size and weight of airplanes landing at Palwaukee. After the Illinois Appellate Court decision in September 1974, a request was sent to the Illinois Supreme Court to hear the case. The Supreme Court has not yet answered the request, Rogers said.

The Appellate Court panel of three judges said the right to regulate the weight of aircraft is under the jurisdiction of the FAA, and not the county or village. The county maintains it had control because of zoning agreements made when the airport runways were built and extended.

Rogers said the court has said the authority to control use of the airport is in the jurisdiction of the FAA, but the FAA has declined any authority except to control air traffic and traffic patterns.

"If the FAA doesn't have the authority, the county should have it," Rogers said. He said the issue may be heard by the Supreme Court because it could affect the operations of more than 300 airports in Illinois. Rogers says counties control airports in most areas of the state.

Rogers and other village residents have complained about low-flying planes approaching the airport over Wheeling, including one glide path that extends directly over Holmes Junior High School, 221 S. Wolf Rd., Wheeling.

ROGERS SAID the extension of Runway 34-16 in 1963 was endorsed by the FAA at a hearing before the County Zoning Board, and he charges the FAA knew the extension would violate FAA regulations and guidelines. He said the FAA also changed the landing pattern on the runway so it passed over Holmes school, although the county agreement required approaches over the forest preserve areas.

Installation of new instruments for landings caused lowering of the glide slope, Rogers said, although an FAA spokesman said no glide slope angle has been established for the runway yet.

Brooks said the complaint that planes fly less than 100 feet over the school is true, but he said that happens in several locations throughout the country.

"I share your concern about FAA's lack of emphasis with regard to safety and health of people on the ground," he said. "The rationale seems to be simply that air safety will enhance the safety of people on the ground."

BECAUSE HIS committee is charged primarily with overseeing government operations, Brooks said, "I am again bringing the Palwaukee situation to the personal attention of the administrator of the FAA. Hopefully he will take action to alleviate your concern."

Rogers said his committee recommended no specific action to the village board because of the pending request before the Supreme Court. He said his concern is the safety of those around the airport, and he feels the FAA regulations in use at Midway Airport in Chicago, if applied to Palwaukee, would offer that protection.

Rogers has battled the airport issue for years, contending that threshold lights are too close to the ends of the property. He says the lights should be moved several hundred feet down the runway to coincide with the approved glide slope. Airport owner George Priester has said the threshold lights are considered "displaced lights" and are not part of the normal operating system of the runway.

The local sceneHigh school at night

Evening high school courses for residents of Maine and Niles townships will begin Feb. 10. Registration will continue through Thursday.

The courses carry credit toward a high school diploma and are open to anyone over 16 years old who is not enrolled in a regular daytime high school. The program has been approved by the boards of education for Maine Township High School Dist. 207 and Niles High School Dist. 219.

Classes meet twice a week, either Monday and Wednesday or Tuesday and Thursday, from 6 to 8 p.m. or 8 to 10 p.m. at Niles West High School, Oakton and the Edens Expressway, Skokie.

6 in district competition

Six Des Plaines youths will enter district competition after winning the local hoop-shoot basketball contest held recently at Rand Park. The yearly contest is sponsored by the Des Plaines Elks Club. District competition was held Saturday at Highland Park Recreation Center. Winners there will move on to the state finals at the University of Illinois at Urbana.

Boys' champion in the 8-9 age bracket is John Nero, who sank 8 of 25 tries. Runnerup was Leo Smith of Park Ridge, who made 7 of 25.

The victor in the 12-13 boys' division was Chris Zebos. He made 18 of 25 tries. Runnerup Robert Bean of Park Ridge tied with Dave Hoelscher of Park Ridge with 17 of 25 attempts, but won in the shootout to break the tie.

In the girls' competition, winner in the 8-9 age bracket was Cindy Sherkey. She scored 10 of 25. Runnerup was Moreen McNaney of Des Plaines, who made 8 of 25.

Girls' champ in the 10-11 age group was Kathy McCabe. Kathy hit 5 of 25 attempts and was the only contestant in her age bracket.

Top honors in the girls' 12-13 age group went to Mary O'Toole, with a score of 14 of 25. Runnerup was Molly Sherkey of Des Plaines who won after a shootout with Kathy Sherry of Des Plaines.

Influx of phone service cited

Ma Bell has village's number; see rate hike

Residents of Schaumburg, Hoffman Estates, Elk Grove Village and other nearby communities can expect their telephone bills to go up.

Illinois Bell Telephone Co. has filed a request with the Illinois Commerce Commission for reclassification of local area service as a result of an influx of telephone service in the calling area, a Bell spokesman said Tuesday.

Increases in the monthly bills for local area service will range from 23 to 30 cents for residence customers and from $1 to $1.75 for business customers, said

Joseph M. Baroska, the company's local manager. The reclassification asks for adjusted rates to become effective Feb. 29.

BAROSKA ESTIMATED the new rates will affect about 2,400 customers in Schaumburg, Hoffman Estates, Roselle and Bloomingdale. Also affected will be areas of Itasca, Elk Grove Village, Glendale Heights, Melrose Park and Keeneyville, he said.

Since 1970, Baroska said there have been several rate brackets for local service based on the number of telephones in a calling area.

When the number of phones in a calling area exceeds its bracket by 5 per cent for a period of six months, as has happened locally, the next higher bracket applies, he said.

He said the rate adjustment is needed because as phones are added, calling volumes increase and additional switching equipment and cable must be provided to handle the load, thereby raising the cost of service. The rate adjustments usually are approved by the ICC.

6.5 million gallons per day

Village to apply for water from lake

Elk Grove Village officials approved Tuesday night an application for a 6.5 million gallon-per-day allocation of Lake Michigan water.

The application will be made to the Illinois Division of Waterways and represents the estimated daily need in 1980.

Village Mgr. Charles Willis told village board members that the application is based on data from an engineering study that considers several alternatives for obtaining the water, including purchase from a suburban water commission.

THE VILLAGE recently approved development of shallow wells for an area west of I-90 where growth is expected in the next three years.

Willis said the village will continue to develop several shallow wells west of Ill. Rte. 53 while it makes plans for the eventual use of lake water.

He said the application to the state for water allocation is the first of a series of documents and negotiations. "We expect to not only submit but be required to prove why we need the water and also expect several months of hearings before we know if the division of waterways will grant our allocation request."

WILLIS STRESSED that the village's water supply is more than adequate. The village has nine deep wells and more than 9 million gallons of reservoir capacity. He said that Elk Grove Village will eventually run out of well water, because of the depleting supply, and be required to use Lake Michigan water.

The village has a contract with the Tree Towns Water Commission, composed of Elmhurst, Villa Park and Lombard in DuPage County. The commission in 1972 offered a plan for pumping water from Lake Michigan to the Northwest suburbs. That plan would supply nearly 2 billion gallons of water a year to Elk Grove Village.

Willis said the state had voided the earlier water allocation and the village hired an engineering firm to represent it in the new allocation hearings now being conducted. He stressed that application to use Lake Michigan water does not necessarily indicate the village's present well water supply will be depleted by 1980.

LWV member enters race for village trustee

Sandra L. Todd, 500 Yarmouth Dr., has announced her candidacy for Elk Grove Village trustee in the April 15 election.

Mrs. Todd, an unsuccessful candidate for village clerk in 1971, plans to file petitions this week for a four-year trustee term. Three terms are available.

"I'm concerned about the lack of credibility and accountability of some members of the present board and think it's time for new blood in there," she said.

Mrs. Todd is critical of the present board's handling of massive furnace failures in the village and said as trustee she would "scrutinize Centex Homes Corp. building-permit requests more closely to ensure that the builder is not cheating the village."

"I DECIDED TO run for trustee because it disturbed me to see an unopposed election," Mrs. Todd said.

A resident of Elk Grove Village since 1962, Mrs. Todd is a member of the League of Women Voters and past member of the village housing commission.

"I've worked with and for PTAs, civic, political, scouting and athletic organizations and through all those contacts over the past several years believe I understand people and know what most residents' main concerns and wants are," she said.

Two other possible candidates who have taken out nominating petitions but have not filed are Melvin Bytnar, 236 Wellington Ave., and Robert Lindahl, 600 Versailles Circle. Bytnar, a member of the housing commission, was an unsuccessful candidate for village trustee in 1973 and Lindahl was defeated in bids for trustee in 1971 and village president in 1973.

Incumbent trustees Michael Tosto, Ronald Chernick and Edward Kenna have filed petitions and seek to retain their seats on the village board. Filing closes Feb. 10.

Sewage plant's effects probed

by TONI GINETTI

Being a guinea pig for science may be valuable for mankind, but it's not much of a way to spend a second birthday.

Little Kristen Schweitzer of Hoffman Estates had put up with getting her hair trimmed and saying "ah" for the girl who dabbed a cotton swab in her throat. But when the woman neared with the needle to draw blood, Kristen had had about enough.

And when a lower lip starts quivering, you don't tell a 2-year-old to be a good girl because she's helping to determine if living near a sewage-treatment plant will be harmful to her health someday.

For Kristen, her three sisters and parents and 200 other persons living in Schaumburg, Hoffman Estates, Rolling Meadows, Elk Grove Village, Itasca and Roselle, these test results will determine if the operation of the John E. Egan Water Reclamation Plant in Schaumburg may cause health problems to those living near it.

Plant's side effects being tested on 220

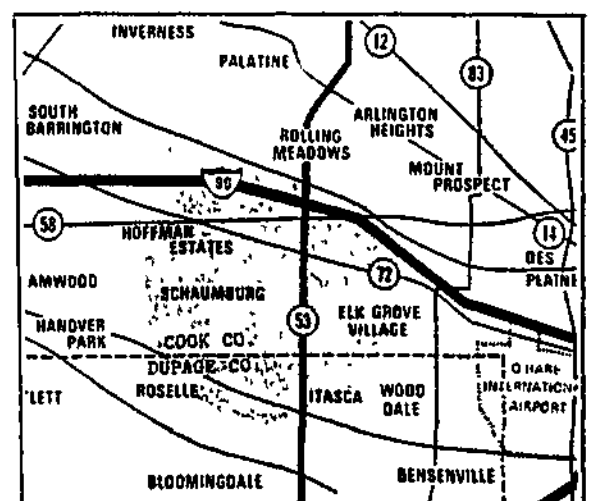

Tests to determine if local residents will be affected by the operation of the John E. Egan Water Reclamation Plant in Schaumburg are being conducted on 220 persons. The residents all live within a two-mile radius of the new filtration plant, between Meacham Road and Ill. Rte. 53 south of Schaumburg Road.

The $43 million plant will open this spring to provide sewage treatment for more than 160,000 persons living in parts of Schaumburg, Palatine and Elk Grove townships. It will be the world's largest tertiary treatment plant with a capacity of 30 million gallons per day.

The tests under way have been commissioned by the federal Environmental Protection Agency to determine if the aeration process that will be used at the plant for waste filtration can produce harmful side effects to nearby residents.

Samples of blood, hair, human waste and saliva as well as soil and water samples from the area will be taken at four different times, twice before the plant opens and twice after it opens.

Volunteers participating in the testing are being paid. The first testing was completed in October and the second was finished Friday. The final two tests will be conducted in October and next January after the plant is operating.

Some students learn in different ways

Conant offers 'alternative' for potential dropout

by KATHERINE BOYCE

Education is supposed to be democratic. The idea is to provide a free public school system for everyone — education for the masses.

But for some students the system just doesn't work. People learn in different ways and some students simply don't make it in schools designed for "everyone."

"We take one program and throw them all in because we're democratic and then start squeezing down on the ones who make trouble," said Leo Butler, assistant principal at Conant High School in Hoffman Estates.

But Conant students are given a choice. This year, five high school systems are operating at once in a building serving 2,300 students. The systems range from the traditional program for freshmen to the "time-priority system" exempting students from class sessions if they have completed assignments and want to work on something else. Geared toward "the motivated student — the 'achiever' — these programs give the student more independence and freedom to learn on his own.

THE NEWEST SYSTEM — alternative education — is for the student who doesn't succeed in a traditional structure, one who does poorly in class, gets frustrated and often is a discipline problem. He's the potential dropout.

Alternative education is being tried at Conant this year. If it proves successful, Dist. 211 officials may expand the system to the other four high schools in the district.

Students in alternative education work individually with teacher Cathy Connor on assignments in math, English, consumer education — any course required for graduation. Each student has a set of assignments which he works on at his own pace.

BUTLER BELIEVES the alternative-education program has been a factor in the decreased dropout rate at Conant. Last school year 33 students dropped out by Nov. 1, but this year only 14 students dropped out in the same period.

Some students still drop out but Butler feels "everyone who has dropped out of this program would have dropped out sooner." There are some failures, but there also are "a few very exciting cases — just complete turnarounds."

One boy often became hostile in regular classes last year. He refused to do his work and constantly disrupted the class. This year he was placed in Miss Connor's room, where he sat at a table and read magazines. For two weeks she tried to get him to work on a math assignment. He ignored her and she left him alone. One day he walked into class, picked up his assignment and started working. Today he's almost caught up on his work and he's lost most of his hostility.

EDUCATORS HAVE spent "too many years hammering away at behavior" and not enough time finding out why students misbehave, Butler said. When a student doesn't do an English assignment, more should be done than simply failing him in the course, Butler said. "We must somehow identify in a deeply human way the needs of kids and know who they really are."

In the past schools "took a whole bunch of people, pushed them into a program and prodded them through like cattle," Miss Connor said. But if education is supposed to be for everyone, schools should help the student who can't make it in a system designed for the majority, she believes.

Miss Connor has been involved in alternative-education programs during most of her teaching career and she has almost completed a master's degree in alternative education.

PROBABLY THE IDEAL situation is a school with an entire alternative-education department, a whole staff of teachers and an entire curriculum of alternative programs, Miss Connor said. But she realizes that's a dream. In public schools, it probably is impossible to design a program for each child.

Miss Connor said the Conant program probably is the next best thing. Students "do much better in my room," she said, and "part of it, of course, is I don't have as many kids in my room."

Butler agrees. "Many just need more one-to-one attention."

There are rarely more than five or six students in Miss Connor's room at one time. Some she sees just two or three times. Some are there three periods each day before they go to regular classrooms. Some need alternative education for just a few weeks and some need it all semester.

BUTLER SEES ALL the school structures at Conant from alternative education to independent study programs, as a set of concentric circles. Students move from one structure to the next as they develop ability, maturity and responsibility. Students are not locked into one structure throughout their high school career.

If students can't conform to school, educators say, perhaps the answer is to make the school conform to the students. In fact, Butler sees alternative education as "one more effort to adjust the atmosphere to the needs of kids."

"You can find a lot of kids who say 'I hate school,'" Butler said, "but I've never heard a kid say I hate learning."

ONE-TO-ONE class sessions between students and teacher Cathy Connor are the basis of the new alternative education program at Conant High School in Hoffman Estates. Educators believe the individualized instruction helps potential dropouts become successful students.

Palwaukee fails runway-design rules

by STEVE FORSYTH

Palwaukee Airport near Wheeling apparently fails to meet several Federal Aviation Administration standards for runway design, a congressional subcommittee studying air traffic safety has found.

U.S. Rep. Jack Brooks, D-Tex., chairman of the government activities subcommittee of the House Committee on Government Operations, said, "If the facts presented are accurate, Palwaukee apparently does not meet several FAA regulations contained in Part 77, Code of Federal Regulations."

Brooks said FAA officials have told him the standards in question are not a threat to air safety, and they plan no immediate action to make Palwaukee comply with the regulations.

In a letter to William Rogers, chairman of Wheeling's Palwaukee Steering Committee, Brooks said the airport "does not appear to have established the required surface distances at the end of Runway 34-16, does not have 500 or 1,000-foot primary surface widths paralleling the central line of the runway at certain locations, and does not appear to have the threshold lights located the proper distances from the edges of Palatine, Wolf and Hintz roads."

BROOKS SAID his conclusions were drawn after a review of information supplied by Rogers' committee and a discussion with FAA officials in Washington, D.C.

"It is 'FAA's position that these standards are not mandatory, but simply recommended guidelines,'" Brooks said.

A recent transportation study approved by the Northeastern Illinois Planning Commission mentioned that several million dollars in improvements would have to be made at Palwaukee to meet federal standards if it were to be converted to a municipal airport, as recommended in the plan.

"FAA also takes the position that it has no authority to regulate the length of the runway or established aircraft weight limitations at privately owned airports," Brooks said. He recommended to Rogers that the local authorities seek enforcement of the conditions in the zoning permit.

"It is suggested that you attempt to establish the fact that Runway 34-16 exceeds the length and weight limits prescribed by the Cook County Zoning Board," he said. "It is my understanding that FAA would not attempt to prevent a state or local authority from enforcing the zoning permit."

THE COUNTY, in a joint suit with Wheeling, recently lost an appeal to control the size and weight of airplanes landing at Palwaukee. After the Illinois Appellate Court decision in September 1974, a request was sent to the Illinois Supreme Court to hear the case. The Supreme Court has not yet answered the request, Rogers said.

The Appellate Court panel of three judges said the right to regulate the weight of aircraft is under the jurisdiction of the FAA, and not the county or village. The county maintains it had control because of zoning agreements made when the airport runways were built and extended.

Rogers said the court has said the authority to control use of the airport is in the jurisdiction of the FAA, but the FAA has declined any authority except to control air traffic and traffic patterns.

"If the FAA doesn't have the authority, the county should have it," Rogers said. He said the issue may be heard by the Supreme Court because it could affect the operations of more than 300 airports in Illinois. Rogers says counties control airports in most areas of the state.

Rogers and other village residents have complained about low-flying planes approaching the airport over Wheeling, including one glide path that extends directly over Holmes Junior High School, 221 S. Wolf Rd., Wheeling.

ROGERS SAID the extension of Runway 34-16 in 1963 was endorsed by the FAA at a hearing before the County Zoning Board, and he charges the FAA knew the extension would violate FAA regulations and guidelines. He said the FAA also changed the landing pattern on the runway so it passed over Holmes school, although the county agreement required approaches over the forest preserve areas.

Installation of new instruments for landings caused lowering of the glide slope, Rogers said, although an FAA spokesman said no glide slope angle has been established for the runway yet.

Brooks said the complaint that planes fly less than 100 feet over the school is true, but he said that happens in several locations throughout the country.

"I share your concern about FAA's lack of emphasis with regard to safety and health of people on the ground," he said. "The rationale seems to be simply that air safety will enhance the safety of people on the ground."

BECAUSE HIS committee is charged primarily with overseeing government operations, Brooks said, "I am again bringing the Palwaukee situation to the personal attention of the administrator of the FAA. Hopefully he will take action to alleviate your concern."

Wed teachers can work at same school

by BOB GALLAS

The High School Dist. 214 Board of Education has reversed its policy of prohibiting married teachers from working at the same school.

The board's action came Monday night as a result of a meeting between attorneys for the teachers' union and the school board.

School attorneys changed their earlier opinion that the board had the right to separate teachers who marry because they said it could affect their performance as educators. The new opinion states that the board is required to prove teacher performance is negatively affected by marriage to separate the teachers.

THE BOARD ACTION apparently was prompted by an appeal of the policy by two district teachers who were transferred after they married. William and Judith Hastert married while working at John Hersey High School, Arlington Heights. Hastert was transferred to Rolling Meadows High School.

Hastert said Tuesday he was pleased by the policy change but was not sure he would transfer back to Hersey immediately because other personnel shifts would result if he did.

"I will go back sometime," said Has-

Building improvements to be studied

A "very rough" list of building improvements, which could cost about $24 million, will be presented tonight by a High School Dist. 214 citizens' committee.

The 40-member committee will meet at 8 p.m. in the district administration center, 799 W. Kensington Rd., Mount Prospect.

James Stoll, committee chairman, said Tuesday the rough cost estimate for the massive list of improvements proposed for the district's eight schools, was "subject to professional refinement" and was not final.

ter, who taught at Hersey with Mrs. Hastert for five years before they were married. The Hasterts are the only couple immediately affected by the change, although several couples married during Christmas vacation would have been transferred soon had the policy not been changed.

GRANT AILBERG, teacher union head, said there was a chance of legal action by the association if the policy had not been changed.

"Our lawyer had investigated and researched the legal possibilities," Ailberg said. "We were reluctant to pursue that sort of action with this type of situation, something that open communication can solve."

he can remember only two in recent years.

"If the community thinks X-rated movies should be banned we have an obligation to pass an ordinance stating that," said Jones. He added the ordinance is actually on the books and it's just a question of enforcing it.

Jones said residents should write a letter to the committee or the advisory board expressing their opinions or attend the committee meetings.

Residents may vote on X-movies ban

Palatine residents may be polled to determine if they support a ban on X-rated movies in the village.

Village Pres. Wendell E. Jones has directed the health, safety and welfare committee of the board and neighborhood council of the Palatine Advisory Board to find out what standards the community believes should be set for movies.

Jones said he has received 16 letters on the issue since a dispute arose over the showing of the X-rated film, "The Sex Shop," at Willow Creek Theater, the village's only theater.

One writer said theater owners have a right to show any film and the other 15 letters supported a ban on X-rated movies, Jones said.

"I don't want to interfere with anyone's rights but you can go too far the other way, too," Jones said. "A higher standard may be appropriate."

Jones said X-rated movies within the village have not become a problem and

Franz takes post in Hazelcrest

Robert Franz, assistant village manager of Elk Grove Village, resigned Tuesday to accept a position as village manager of Hazelcrest.

Franz has worked with Village Mgr. Charles Willis for the last 4½ years as an administrative assistant. He was hired as an administrative intern in October 1971 while attending graduate school at Northern Illinois University. Franz was appointed full-time administrative assistant in January 1972.

He served as assistant to Willis until his appointment as assistant manager last May. Franz' resignation will be effective Feb. 17.

Willis commended Franz for "his dedication and service to the community."

Willis noted that Franz is the second of nine administrative interns, who have worked in the village, to have attained managerial positions in other municipalities.

A South Suburban community, Hazelcrest has a population of about 13,000.

Influx of phone service cited

Ma Bell has village's number; see rate hike

Residents of Schaumburg, Hoffman Estates, Elk Grove Village and other nearby communities can expect their telephone bills to go up.

Illinois Bell Telephone Co. has filed a request with the Illinois Commerce Commission for reclassification of local area service as a result of an influx of telephone service in the calling area, a Bell spokesman said Tuesday.

Increases in the monthly bills for local area service will range from 25 to 30 cents for residence customers and from $1 to $1.75 for business customers, said

Joseph M. Baroska, the company's local manager. The reclassification asks for adjusted rates to become effective Feb. 28.

BAROSKA ESTIMATED the new rates will affect about 2,400 customers in Schaumburg, Hoffman Estates, Roselle and Bloomingdale. Also affected will be areas of Itasca, Elk Grove Village, Glendale Heights, Medinah and Keeneyville, he said.

Since 1970, Baroska said there have been several rate brackets for local service based on the number of telephones in a calling area.

When the number of phones in a calling area exceeds its bracket by 5 per cent for a period of six months, as has happened locally, the next higher bracket applies, he said.

He said the rate adjustment is needed because as phones are added, calling volumes increase and additional switching equipment and cable must be provided to handle the load, thereby raising the cost of service. The rate adjustments usually are approved by the ICC.

Post pays $27,450 yearly

Coste named first village manager by board vote

Schaumburg Village Administrator John E. Coste was appointed to the new post of village manager Tuesday night by the village board.

Coste, 53, was named to the $27,450 post Tuesday by unanimous decision of the village board. He has served as village administrator for the last three years and earlier worked as assistant manager of the Village of Arlington Heights after his 1969 retirement from 26 years in the Navy.

Coste thanked village officials for confidence expressed in him and said he hopes to demonstrate it is well founded.

"I'm optimistic this new venture in village government will be successful. Nobody has a better foundation to build on or a group of people to work with," Coste said.

TRUSTEE James Guthrie, chairman of the manager selection committee, described Coste as "an individual with all the qualifications and background we have been looking for."

Coste was chosen from a field of 31 candidates who responded to advertisements in professional magazines.

Talking informally after Tuesday Night's village board meeting, Coste said he expects to leave today for a short vacation in Hawaii.

Earlier in the meeting, Carolyn Sue Jordan, 726 Kents Ct., asked what authority the village board has to adopt a managerial form of government without a referendum. Mrs. Jordan is Schaumburg Citizens for Planned Progress candidate for village clerk, opposing incumbent Sandy Carsello in the April election.

The village manager form of government was adopted by ordinance last year, Village Atty. Jack Siegel told Mrs. Jordan, explaining that the procedure is an alternative to a referendum.

Helicopter pad planned at Woodfield Plaza

by PAT GERLACH

A helicopter landing pad is being planned on the roof of a new eight-story Woodfield Plaza office building to be occupied in April by the Illinois Dept. of Transportation.

The landing pad, about 34 feet by 54 feet, would accommodate state helicopters used in location studies, accident and construction investigation and emergency trauma cases, said Ralph Wanner, assistant engineer for the department's District 1.

Chicago and Elgin offices will be consolidated in the new building in J. Emil Anderson and Sons Woodfield Park at the southeast corner of Golf and Meacham roads, Schaumburg.

THE MOVE TO Schaumburg will affect about 850 employees who handle highway and waterway matters for the six-county Chicago metropolitan area.

Wanner said the Village of Schaumburg is being asked to grant a land-use variation to permit construction of the heliport.

Schaumburg's zoning board of appeals has scheduled a Feb. 12 public hearing on the variation. It will be held at 8 p.m. at Civic Center, 101 S. Schaumburg Ct.

Wanner said the Federal Aviation Administration does not license heliports but provides guidelines for their construction. Licensing, he explained, is done by the general aviation division of the state transportation department.

Airspace studies for the proposed heliport will be done after the zoning is approved, Louis Yates, an FAA spokesman, said Tuesday.

WANNER NOTED that the heliport will be built above the penthouse roof and said plans meet all FAA safety regulations, including installation of chain link fencing and perimeter landing lights.

Stairs will lead to the main roof level but the heliport will be restricted to state personnel and not open to the public, Wanner added.

Plans for the facility are being prepared by A. A. Demma, an architect with the Anderson development firm.

Village exempts taxing bodies from utility levy

Local governmental bodies in Hoffman Estates will be exempt from paying the village's new 5 per cent utility tax.

In a vote decided by Village Pres. Virginia Hayter, the village board approved a resolution that will allow the village to return to taxing bodies the 5 per cent payment on gas, electric and telephone bills. The vote came after the board debated the resolution for the second time in two weeks.

The 3-to-3 deadlock on the issue was broken when Mrs. Hayter voted in favor of the proposal. Opposing the plan were Trustees Edward Hennessy, Dyrle Rathman and Melvin Timmons.

The action will mean any utility tax paid by school districts, park districts, fire protection district and the County Forest Preserve District, all with offices in the village, will be returned.

HOWEVER, THE ADDED charges tacked on by the utility companies to collect the tax will be retained by the companies, a point that drew stiff criticism from board members.

"It's a ripoff," Trustee Bruce Lind charged. Lind said he agreed with the dissenting trustees that the utility companies would unjustly benefit by the action, but Mrs. Hayter said the collection charge is authorized by the Illinois Commerce Commission.

The village as yet does not know how much money will be involved in the rebates, although the tax is expected to generate about $300,000 yearly. The rebates will be sent after the taxing bodies present receipts of bill payments.

Schaumburg Township Dist. 54 officials have estimated the tax would cost the district $9,000.

Some trustees criticized the move because it will take money away from payment of the fire department debt, for which the tax was passed. Timmons said the districts all receive fire protection service but "you are suggesting we give them back their money with a loss of the collection fee."

HENNESSY QUESTIONED whether the village would also waive the tax on real estate tax-exempt property such as that owned by religious organizations. But Trustee William Cowin, finance committee chairman, said the committee did not consider that.

Mrs. Hayter added she would not favor such a move.

"It is not normal that one taxing body taxes another," Cowin said after Timmons said he "didn't think it was worth our time and bother" to rebate the money.

The money will be rebated to the districts on a quarterly basis throughout the year. A similar rebate program is provided in Arlington Heights where the village also levies a 5 per cent utility tax.

Schools, village to discuss developer land donations

The Schaumburg Township Dist. 54 Board of Education will meet Thursday with Schaumburg Village Board members to discuss problems in obtaining contributions for schools from developers.

Dist. 54 officials have complained that some of the school sites donated are unsuitable for school buildings. After repeated contacts with developers, the district decided to take the matter to village officials.

Road work to cause snarls in traffic

Construction this spring on major thoroughfares in and around Hoffman Estates may cause serious traffic tie-ups.

Village Pres. Virginia Hayter told the village board this week construction planned by the state and county on several local roads may take place at similar times and could cause traffic problems. She asked Supt. of Public Works John Hossack for a list of the planned construction and timetables for the work so residents can be warned in advance if roads will be blocked.

Scheduled for improvement this year are parts of Schaumburg Road, Meacham Road, Bode Road, Higgins Road and Roselle Road, all which traverse or border the village.

Funds sought for ambulance

The village will apply for federal funds to help pay for a third village ambulance. The application, approved by the board this week, would be made for 75 per cent of the cost of the $18,900 ambulance.

Village Mgr. George Longmeyer said the funds are distributed on a first-come, first-serve basis. If approved the grant would provide $12,500 for the ambulance, requiring the village to pay only $6,400.

The ambulance will be used at the village's fourth fire station under construction near Freeman Road and Mumford Drive in the Westbury subdivision.

Conant senior on panel

A senior at Conant High School has been appointed to serve on the village Youth Commission. Tracy A. Burns, 105 Evanston St., was named to serve on the commission until April 30, 1976. Miss Burns has been involved in student council affairs at Conant.

'Women on Go'

The Schaumburg Park District "Women on the Go" program will ring in the "Year of the Rabbit" on a trip to Chicago's Chinatown Feb. 11, Chinese New Year's day.

Registration for the trip is being taken through Feb. 5 at the Meineke Community Center, 220 E. Weatherfield Way. The fee is $12. Lunch will be at the Royal Pacific Restaurant, and there will be shopping before joining the New Year festivities.

At Whispering Glen Apartments

Building's fate to be determined by panel

Mayor Roland J. Meyer agreed Tuesday night to appoint a three-man panel to determine if a fire-damaged building in Whispering Glen Apartments should be demolished.

But Meyer said he will not be prepared to name the three persons until later this week or early next week, after he has more opportunity to discuss membership on the panel with City Atty. Donald M. Rose. Meyer also will be contacting potential appointees to determine their willingness to serve on the panel.

Makeup of the board may not be the same as proposed by Public Works Supt. John Hennessy, who also is acting building and zoning officer. Hennessy already has submitted to the mayor a list of six persons, two representing each of three fields — insurance appraisal, architecture and general contracting.

MEYER SAID his preference is to include a structural engineer, rather than an insurance appraiser. The general contractor "would know the quality of material used in the building," and should be able to estimate values, said Meyer. Although he had earlier suggested a legal expert would be an appropriate member of the panel, Meyer said Tuesday night he had discussed that possibility with Rose, and Rose believes his advice as city attorney would be sufficient.

Meyer emphasized he wants "to be sure these are qualified people," since there is the possibility the owners or managing representatives of the apartment complex will dispute the panel's judgment in court. City ordinances provide for mayoral appointment of three persons to determine whether damage to a building equals 50 per cent of the total value of the structure. If it is found damage meets that test, the panel can order demolition within 20 days of its ruling.

Meyer said there are two possible ways such a ruling could wind up in court. The owners and management of Whispering Glen could fail to comply, and the city could file suit seeking a court order for demolition, which would carry penalties and risk of contempt citations for failure to obey. The other possibility is that the owners or their representatives would file immediate suit if a demolition order was issued, asking to have the order overturned.

City OKs aid to undercover unit

The Rolling Meadows City Council Tuesday night appropriated $3,000 to the Metropolitan Enforcement Group (MEG), an undercover narcotics agency.

In unanimously approving the funds, Rolling Meadows became one of the only communities that have not supplied a patrolman full-time to work with MEG but have agreed to financially aid the agency.

The city's expense for the MEG service is much less under the contribution plan than it would be if the city assigned a patrolman to work with MEG. Ald. Thomas W. Scanlan, 1st, chairman of the committee recommending the donation, has said it would cost $20,000 in salary, fringe benefits and transportation to supply one undercover agent.

MEG now operates with more than 50 men from 26 suburbs, the City of Chicago and the county, each paid by their home police department. It operates throughout the county, and spokesmen have said it will continue to assist communities unable to supply men or finances.

MEG has lost a substantial portion of the federal financing that was provided to start the program, and has requested $3,000 from each community that has not supplied a man.

Although MEG records do not indicate a breakdown of arrests for each suburb, it has arrested 165 persons since its establishment in 1972 from communities with populations of 10,000 to 19,999, which includes Rolling Meadows.

Scanlan said his committee "to a man endorses MEG and highly recommends" financial support.

and Ill. Rte. 53, is the former Meadow Trace Apartments complex. It is owned by the Kassuba Corp., which currently is in the midst of bankruptcy proceedings in federal court, and is managed by the Littlestone Co. The building in question was damaged in a fire last Aug. 29, which destroyed eight apartments fitting in a 63-foot strip in the center of the 200-foot long structure. The building has been vacant since the fire, but city officials say it has become an attractive nuisance to young persons and contributes to delinquency and vagrancy.

'20th' fete may preempt city's July 4 celebration

Rolling Meadows may forego a Fourth of July celebration this year.

Ald. Thomas J. Waldron, 2nd, said he will suggest that the city's annual festivities be eliminated this year because so much effort is being poured into the city's 20th anniversary celebration May 22-25.

"I don't see how we can have a parade or anything," said Waldron, noting that most of the people who have worked on July 4 preparations in past years now are involved in the planning for the four days of the citywide birthday party.

WALDRON SAID his public information and education committee had timed for the Fourth of July before plans were fixed for the anniversary observance. The anniversary committee was not willing to combine the two events because it already had made commitments with some groups for a May celebration, he said.

Waldron also said he will invite members of the city council's public information and education committee to discuss a 1978 Bicentennial project. If the city does embark on Bicentennial planning, it will be the last Northwest suburb to do so. The official Illinois observance will start July 5 and end Dec. 3, 1976.

Some suburbs are planning to start their celebrations this year, although others are waiting for the Bicentennial year. Among the projects under preparation are a mock Revolutionary War battle, building restorations, development of a replica of a typical 1890s farm, spelling bees and ice cream socials.

Three area suburbs, Des Plaines, Schaumburg and Arlington Heights, have been certified as official Bicentennial communities. State grants are being made available to some communities throughout the state. Waldron said he is not interested in seeking aid for a Rolling Meadows observance, because grants "usually have too many strings attached," but would rather see the city work up something of its own.

Wed teachers now can work in same school

by BOB GALLAS

The High School Dist. 214 Board of Education has reversed its policy of prohibiting married teachers from working at the same school.

The board's action came Monday night as a result of a meeting between attorneys for the teachers' union and the school board.

School attorneys changed their earlier opinion that the board had the right to separate teachers who marry because they said it could affect their performance as educators. The new opinion states that the board is required to prove

by TONI GINETTI

Being a guinea pig for science may be valuable for mankind, but it's not much of a way to spend a second birthday.

Little Kristen Schweitzer of Hoffman Estates had put up with getting her hair trimmed and saying "ah" for the girl who dabbed a cotton swab in her throat. But when the woman neared with the needle to draw blood, Kristen had had about enough.

And when a lower lip starts quivering, you don't tell a 2-year-old to be a good girl because she's helping to determine if living near a sewage-treatment plant will be harmful to her health someday.

For Kristen, her three sisters and parents and 200 other persons living in Schaumburg, Hoffman Estates, Rolling Meadows, Elk Grove Village, Itasca and Roseville, these test results will determine if the operation of the John E. Egan Water Reclamation Plant in Schaumburg may cause health problems to those living near it.

Plant's side effects being tested on 220

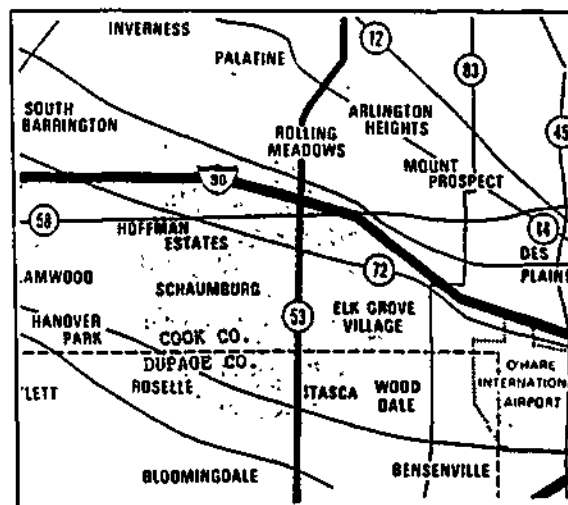

Tests to determine if local residents will be affected by the operation of the John E. Egan Water Reclamation Plant in Schaumburg are being conducted on 220 persons. The residents all live within a two-mile radius of the new filtration plant, between Meacham Road and Ill. Rte. 53 south of Schaumburg Road.

The $43 million plant will open this spring to provide sewage treatment for more than 180,000 persons living in parts of Schaumburg, Palatine and Elk Grove townships. It will be the world's largest tertiary treatment plant with a capacity of 30 million gallons per day.

The tests under way have been commissioned by the federal Environmental Protection Agency to determine if the aeration process that will be used at the plant for waste filtration can produce harmful side effects to nearby residents.

Samples of blood, hair, human waste and saliva as well as soil and water samples from the area will be taken at four different times, twice before the plant opens and twice after it opens.

Volunteers participating in the testing are being paid. The first testing was completed in October and the second was finished Friday. The final two tests will be conducted in October and next January after the plant is operating.

Unincorporated areas need voice in parks, 3 say

by DIANE MERMIGAS
A news analysis

Three former Palatine Rural Park Board officials are running in the Palatine Park District election because they fear that unincorporated-area residents will not have sufficient voice in future park development.

All three candidates have acknowledged the Palatine Park Board's willingness to develop parks in unincorporated areas of the newly merged district, but have questioned the representation of rural-area residents in the decision-making phase of those developments.

Eugene F. Dorsch, one of the Palatine Park Board candidates, was vice president of the rural park district, which served unincorporated Palatine Township, Dorsch, 18 W. Garden Ave., filed a petition late Monday. Five candidates are running in the election.

Patricia Picardi, former secretary of the rural board, and John J. Turner, former rural park board commissioner, also are candidates for the single Palatine Park board seat up for election April 15.

Dorsch is concerned because only one former rural park board commissioner is on the new board. The two districts merged Jan. 1.

ALL THREE CANDIDATES believe there should be two former rural park board officials on the new board for at least the first two years. Thomas Patten, former president of the rural park district, is the only unincorporated-area resident on the park board.

"That gives the unincorporated-area residents only one vote on a board of five commissioners," Mrs. Picardi said. "The rural area residents know more than anyone what facilities they would like to see, and where they would like to see them. Their input into this park development is vital."

The rural park district began plans for the development of its first park at Home Street and Oak Avenue before the merger. The new board still intends to develop the five-acre park, and is in the process of making some minor changes in the plans.

Those changes, plus the handling of funds from the defunct rural park district, and the over-all development of parks in the rural areas particularly concern Dorsch, he said.

Resident arrested in station burglary

A Rolling Meadows man was arrested Monday for the December burglary of an Arlington Heights service station.

Arrested by Rolling Meadows police on an Arlington Heights warrant was Norris Bristow, 21, of 2300 Eastman, Rolling Meadows. He was charged with the December burglary of the Arlington Standard service station, 1000 S. Arlington Heights Rd., Arlington Heights.

Bristow was released on $5,000 bond pending a Friday appearance in the Arlington Heights branch of Circuit Court.

Helicopter pad planned at Woodfield Plaza

by PAT GERLACH

A helicopter landing pad is being planned on the roof of a new eight-story Woodfield Plaza office building to be occupied in April by the Illinois Dept. of Transportation.

The landing pad, about 34 feet by 54 feet, would accommodate state helicopters used in location studies, accident and construction investigation and emergency trauma cases, said Ralph Waner, assistant engineer for the department's District 1.

Chicago and Elgin offices will be consolidated in the new building in J. Emil Anderson and Sons Woodfield Park at the southeast corner of Golf and Meacham roads, Schaumburg.

THE MOVE TO Schaumburg will affect about 850 employees who handle highway and waterway matters for the six-county Chicago metropolitan area.

Waner said the Village of Schaumburg is being asked to grant a land-use variation to permit construction of the heliport.

Schaumburg's zoning board of appeals has scheduled a Feb. 12 public hearing on the variation. It will be held at 8 p.m. at Civic Center, 101 S. Schaumburg Ct.

Ex-Wheeling official out of prison soon

William Bieher, former Wheeling building director who pleaded guilty last year to federal extortion, perjury and tax charges, will end his prison sentence in late February, The Herald learned Tuesday.

Bieher was released Jan. 17 from federal prison in Springfield, Mo., and is at the Community Correction Center, 826 S. Wabash, Chicago.

Bieher was sentenced to a year in prison and began his sentence July 18. He was denied parole Oct. 1.

Robert Thompson, center director, Tuesday confirmed Bieher's move to Chicago. "He is in a transitional program that is designed to prepare him for his release."

The program allows Bieher to work outside the center and to eat dinner with his family on weekdays. Bieher returns to the center weeknights, but spends allowed weekends at home.

"The idea is to reestablish him in work and family settings," Thompson said.

Bieher received a Christmas furlough from federal prison in December and his attorney, David Schippers, has attempted to win Bieher's release from prison because "he has been very sick." Bieher reportedly injured his back in a 1973 auto accident.

Although six former Wheeling and Cook County officials were indicted for the shakedowns of builders in the Wheeling area, only Bieher and James Stavros, former Wheeling Township Democratic committeeman, were sentenced to prison. Stavros is serving a four-year sentence at the federal correctional institution at Lexington, Ky.

teacher performance is negatively affected by marriage to separate the teachers.

THE BOARD ACTION apparently was prompted by an appeal of the policy by two district teachers who were transferred after they married. William and Judith Hastert married while working at John Hersey High School, Arlington Heights. Hastert was transferred to Rolling Meadows High School.

Hastert said Tuesday he was pleased by the policy change but was not sure he would transfer back to Hersey immediately because other personnel shifts would result if he did.

"I will go back sometime," said Hastert, who taught at Hersey with Mrs. Hastert for five years before they were married. The Hasterts are the only couple immediately affected by the change, although several couples married during Christmas vacation would have been transferred soon had the policy not been changed.

GRANT AILBERG, teacher union head, said there was a chance of legal action by the association if the policy had not been changed.

"Our lawyer had investigated and researched the legal possibilities," Ailberg said. "We were reluctant to pursue that sort of action with this type of situation, something that open communication can solve."

Baseball signup Saturday

Rolling Meadows Boys Baseball Assn. will conduct registration for the 1975 season from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. Saturday at the Community Church of Rolling Meadows, Kirchoff Road and Meadow Drive.

At least one parent or legal guardian must accompany each child.

Another registration day will be Feb. 15.

NOBODY LIKES CONSTRUCTION, but the result sewer line installation on Kirchoff Road will serve Kirchoff roads. Meanwhile, several homeowners on sometimes is worth the inconvenience. Water and the Rywick Village subdivision on E. Frontage and Kirchoff Road have had blocked driveways.

No immediate action planned

by STEVE FORSYTH

Palwaukee Airport near Wheeling apparently fails to meet several Federal Aviation Administration standards for runway design, a congressional subcommittee studying air traffic safety has found.

U.S. Rep. Jack Brooks, D-Tex., chairman of the government activities subcommittee of the House Committee on Government Operations, said, "If the facts presented are accurate, Palwaukee apparently does not meet several FAA regulations contained in Part 77, Code of Federal Regulations."

Brooks said FAA officials have told him the standards in question are not a threat to air safety, and they plan no immediate action to make Palwaukee comply with the regulations.

In a letter to William Rogers, chairman of Wheeling's Palwaukee Steering Committee, Brooks said the airport "does not appear to have established the required surface distances at the end of Runway 34-16, does not have 500 or 1,000-foot primary surface widths paralleling the central line of the runway at certain locations, and does not appear to have the threshold lights located the proper distances from the edges of Palatine, Wolf and Hintz roads."

BROOKS SAID his conclusions were drawn after a review of information supplied by Rogers' committee and a discussion with FAA officials in Washington, D.C.

"It is 'FAA's position that these standards are not mandatory, but simply recommended guidelines,' Brooks said.

A recent transportation study approved by the Northeastern Illinois Planning Commission mentioned that several million dollars in improvements would have to be made at Palwaukee to meet federal standards if it were to be converted to a municipal airport, as recommended in the plan.

"FAA also takes the position that it has no authority to regulate the length of the runway or established aircraft weight limitations at privately owned airports," Brooks said. He recommended to Rogers that the local authorities seek enforcement of the conditions in the zoning permit.

"It is suggested that you attempt to establish the fact that Runway 34-16 exceeds the length and weight limits prescribed by the Cook County Zoning Board," he said. "It is my understanding that FAA would not attempt to prevent a state or local authority from enforcing the zoning permit."

THE COUNTY, in a joint suit with Wheeling, recently lost an appeal to control the size and weight of airplanes landing at Palwaukee. After the Illinois Appellate Court decision in September 1974, a request was sent to the Illinois Supreme Court to hear the case. The Supreme Court has not yet answered the request, Rogers said.

The Appellate Court panel of three judges said the right to regulate the weight of aircraft is under the jurisdiction of the FAA, and not the county or village. The county maintains it had control because of zoning agreements made when the airport runways were built and extended.

Rogers said the court has said the authority to control use of the airport is in the jurisdiction of the FAA, but the FAA has declined any authority except to control air traffic and traffic patterns.

"If the FAA doesn't have the authority, the county should have it," Rogers said. He said the issue may be heard by the Supreme Court because it could affect the operations of more than 300 airports in Illinois. Rogers says counties control airports in most areas of the state.

Rogers and other village residents have complained about low-flying planes approaching the airport over Wheeling, including one glide path that extends directly over Holmes Junior High School, 221 S. Wolf Rd., Wheeling.

ROGERS SAID the extension of Runway 34-16 in 1963 was endorsed by the FAA at a hearing before the County Zoning Board, and he charges the FAA knew the extension would violate FAA regulations and guidelines. He said the FAA also changed the landing pattern on the runway so it passed over Holmes school, although the county agreement required approaches over the forest preserve areas.

Installation of new instruments for landings caused lowering of the glide slope, Rogers said, although an FAA spokesman said no glide slope angle has been established for the runway yet.

Brooks said the complaint that planes fly less than 100 feet over the school is true, but he said that happens in several locations throughout the country.

"I share your concern about FAA's lack of emphasis with regard to safety and health of people on the ground," he said. "The rationale seems to be simply that air safety will enhance the safety of people on the ground."

BECAUSE HIS committee is charged primarily with overseeing government operations, Brooks said, "I am again bringing the Palwaukee situation to the personal attention of the administrator of the FAA. Hopefully he will take action to alleviate your concern."

Only 3 file for open Inverness park seats

Only three candidates have filed petitions for three seats up for election on the Inverness Park Board April 15.

Walter Anderson, park board president, will not run for reelection to the board. Anderson 1660 Beaver Pond Rd., has served as president of the park board for four years.

Houghton Baer, 1751 First Rd., has announced his candidacy for Anderson's six-year seat on the board and has no opponents.

Comr. Donald Kleffer, 1031 Dairy Ln., is seeking election to a six-year term. Comr. Sargent Heath, 349 Rob Roy Ct., is seeking election to a two-year seat.

Both incumbents were appointed to board vacancies during the past year.

List of building improvements to be studied

A "very rough" list of building improvements, which could cost about $24 million, will be presented tonight by a High School Dist. 214 citizens' committee.

The 40-member committee will meet at 8 p.m. in the district administration center, 799 W. Kensington Rd., Mount Prospect.

James Stoll, committee chairman, said Tuesday the rough cost estimate for the massive list of improvements proposed for the district's eight schools, was "subject to professional refinement" and was not final.

Stoll estimated that half of the total cost involved would go into major improvements and renovation at the district's oldest schools, Forest View and Arlington.

Stoll said the committee will decide tonight whether to request professional help for estimating costs of proposed additions and improvements.

The committee has been working for the past several months, touring buildings to assess needs and getting cost estimates for improvements that range from fieldhouses and swimming pools to greenhouses and additional classroom space.

Drug suspect picks cop to deal with

An alleged marijuana dealer picked the wrong place to discuss his operations Monday when he mentioned making a sale in the 7-Eleven Food Store at 2202 Algonquin Rd., Rolling Meadows, police said.

Off-duty Patrolman Terry Severin said he overheard Elias Z. Rodriguez, 31, address unknown, talking to a store clerk, and asked Rodriguez if he sold marijuana. Rodriguez allegedly said he did, and arranged to meet Severin later outside the store. When Rodriguez returned, Severin was waiting, along with other police.

Rodriguez was charged with selling $75 worth of marijuana, and is being held in County Jail pending a preliminary hearing Friday. He was being held in lieu of $10,000 bond.

New utility deal paves way for annexation

by JOANN VAN WYE

Palatine officials negotiated a new purchase agreement Tuesday for part of the Ferndale Heights Utility Co. system, a move that may make annexation to the village more appealing to residents of three northern subdivisions.

The new agreement reduces the purchase price for part of the utility system from $2.023 million to $1.995 million and adds a 40-acre area to the portion of the system that will be sold.

The effect of the new agreement on residents of English Valley, Heatherlen and Pepper Tree subdivisions could be lower water and sewer rates if they annex to the village.

Previously the annual water and sewer cost for residents in the three subdivisions if they annexed to the village was estimated at $173.75. The new purchase agreement will reduce the size of the bond issue that will have to be sold to purchase the utility and spread the cost of retiring the bonds to a larger number of residents.

"This could very definitely make the difference (in favor of annexation)," said Gene Dorsch, president of the English Valley Homeowners Assn. "The village will have to come back with favorable rates."

NO NEW RATES have been figured by the village. The rates are "going to be lower but how much we don't know. It will be noticeable," said Village Mgr. Anton H. Harwig.

Lower water and sewer rates would offset higher taxes residents of the three subdivisions in Palatine Township would experience if they annexed to the village.

Residents of the subdivisions expressed reservations about annexing to the village when they met with village officials in December. Several residents, however, indicated they would look more favorably on annexation if the village could negotiate a lower purchase price for the utility system. The resident said they had paid $30 for their water meters when they moved in and this should be deducted from any purchase agreement.

"The people should be encouraged. We have negotiated a new price on the basis of the meters and followed through on their requests," said Village Pres. Wendell E. Jones. "We are interested in cooperating with them."

JONES SAID he felt annexation to the village should be initiated by the residents of the subdivisions. Petitions requesting annexation signed by more than 50 per cent of the residents would be necessary before the village could annex the area, he said.

The village is interested in annexing the property so it can round out its boundaries, have control of growth on its fringe and receive additional tax dollars, Jones said.

The additional 40 acres north of the Countryside complex would extend the village's boundaries to Dundee Road. The property, known as the Koop Farm, has already received zoning from the county for the construction of 600 apartment units, said Jones.

Village officials previously stated they would not exercise their option to purchase the utility company unless the residents of the subdivision voted to annex to the village. Jones said some board members may want to review this decision and go ahead with the purchase.

The projected water and sewer rates if the village purchases the utility company and the subdivisions are not annexed is nearly $250 annually.

3 seek park board voice for unincorporated areas

by DIANE MERMIGAS

A news analysis

Three former Palatine Rural Park Board officials are running in the Palatine Park District election because they fear that unincorporated-area residents will not have sufficient voice in future park development.

All three candidates have acknowledged the Palatine Park Board's willingness to develop parks in unincorporated areas of the newly merged district, but have questioned the representation of rural-area residents in the decision-making phase of those developments.

Eugene F. Dorsch, one of the Palatine Park Board candidates, was vice president of the rural park district, which served unincorporated Palatine Township. Dorsch, 18 W. Garden Ave., filed a petition late Monday. Five candidates are running in the election.

Patricia Picardi, former secretary of the rural board, and John J. Turner, former rural park board commissioner, also are candidates for the single Palatine Park Board seat up for election April 15.

Dorsch is concerned because only one former rural park board commissioner is on the new board. The two districts merged Jan. 1.

ALL THREE CANDIDATES believe there should be two former rural park board officials on the new board for at least the first two years. Thomas Patten, former president of the rural park district, is the only unincorporated-area resident on the park board.

"That gives the unincorporated-area residents only one vote on a board of five commissioners," Mrs. Picardi said. "The rural area residents know more than anyone what facilities they would like to see, and where they would like to see them. Their input into this park development is vital."

The rural park district began plans for the development of its first park at Home Street and Oak Avenue before the merger. The new board still intends to develop the five-acre park, and is in the process of making some minor changes in the plans.

Those changes, plus the handling of funds from the defunct rural park district, and the over-all development of parks in the rural areas particularly concern Dorsch, he said.

A MERGER ORDINANCE, approved by both park boards, provided for a committee of former rural park board commissioners to disburse the former district's funds and advise on the development.

Village poll may be made on X-rated films

Palatine residents may be polled to determine if they support a ban on X-rated movies in the village.

Village Pres. Wendell E. Jones has directed the health, safety and welfare committee of the board and neighborhood council of the Palatine Advisory Board to find out what standards the community believes should be set for movies.

Jones said he has received 16 letters on the issue since a dispute arose over the showing of the X-rated film, "The Sex Shop," at Willow Creek Theater, the village's only theater.

One writer said theater owners have a right to show any film and the other 15 letters supported a ban on X-rated movies, Jones said.

"I don't want to interfere with anyone's rights but you can go too far the other way, too," Jones said. "A higher standard may be appropriate."

Jones said X-rated movies within the village have not become a problem and he can remember only two in recent years.

"If the community thinks X-rated movies should be banned we have an obligation to pass an ordinance stating that," said Jones. He added the ordinance is actually on the books and it's just a question of enforcing it.

Jones said residents should write a letter to the committee or the advisory board expressing their opinions or attend the committee meetings.

by TONI GINETTI

Being a guinea pig for science may be valuable for mankind, but it's not much of a way to spend a second birthday.

Little Kristen Schweitzer of Hoffman Estates had put up with getting her hair trimmed and saying "ah" for the girl who dabbed a cotton swab in her throat. But when the woman neared with the needle to draw blood, Kristen had had about enough.

And when a lower lip starts quivering, you don't tell a 2-year-old to be a good girl because she's helping to determine if living near a sewage-treatment plant will be harmful to her health someday.

For Kristen, her three sisters and parents and 200 other persons living in Schaumburg, Hoffman Estates, Rolling Meadows, Elk Grove Village, Itasca and Roselle, those test results will determine if the operation of the John E. Egan Water Reclamation Plant in Schaumburg may cause health problems to those living near it.

Plant's side effects being tested on 220

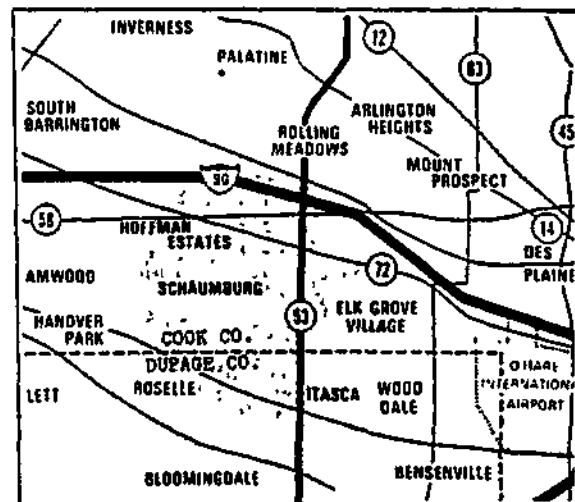

Tests to determine if local residents will be affected by the operation of the John E. Egan Water Reclamation Plant in Schaumburg are being conducted on 220 persons. The residents all live within a two-mile radius of the new filtration plant, between Meacham Road and Ill. Rte. 53 south of Schaumburg Road.

The $43 million plant will open this spring to provide sewage treatment for more than 160,000 persons living in parts of Schaumburg, Palatine and Elk Grove townships. It will be the world's largest tertiary treatment plant with a capacity of 30 million gallons per day.

The tests under way have been commissioned by the federal Environmental Protection Agency to determine if the aeration process that will be used at the plant for waste filtration can produce harmful side effects to nearby residents.

Samples of blood, hair, human waste and saliva as well as soil and water samples from the area will be taken at four different times, twice before the plant opens and twice after it opens.

Volunteers participating in the testing are being paid. The first testing was completed in October and the second was finished Friday. The final two tests will be conducted in October and next January after the plant is operating.

Church kitchen checks — just harassment?

"Too many cooks spoil the broth," said one irate Palatine resident who wishes village officials would keep away from church suppers.

David Kuh, chairman of the Palatine Zoning Board of Appeals, said the village health department is harassing church supporters by inspecting the kitchens and requiring permits for pot luck suppers, banquets and the like.

"This establishes a precedent that strikes at the very social root of the community," Kuh told the village board this week.

Trustee Bryan P. Coughlin Jr. said he understood most cases of mass food poisoning come from church suppers. Cecil Kistler, Palatine health director, confirmed there is a larger incidence of food poisoning in temporary food operations than with commercial establishments.

KISTLER SAID the village this year started issuing permits for temporary food operations to make sure they followed village, state and federal standards. There is no charge for the permit and in most cases no inspection of facilities is necessary.

"It's our idea to work with them to help them and help the people," said Kistler.

Kistler said in most cases a person from the church or other organization contacts the health department about a week before the event. A health department official reviews proper food service operations that are applicable.

In some cases, Kistler said he has made an inspection of the kitchen because he is not familiar with it but said the inspections are not routine.

The village is just trying to give the organizations guidelines to follow so they won't run into any health-related problems, Village Pres. Wendell E. Jones said.

THE PALATINE Jaycee Wives provided a special treat for youngsters at the Santa Teresita Day Care Center, Palatine, Tuesday. The wives brought costumes and decorations and two women — Darlene Bailey and Marlene Tempelman — dressed up as clowns to entertain the kids. This is one of many service projects sponsored by the Jaycee Wives during the year.

Library expands bookmobile route

The Palatine District Library has extended its weekly bookmobile route to include additional areas of Palatine Township.

The bookmobile will make stops Wednesdays and Saturdays. Unincorporated-area residents also can apply for a library card free of charge under the new program.

The bookmobile will stop at the Samuel Kirk Center, 520 S. Plum Grove Rd., from 11 a.m. to 12:45 p.m. Wednesdays. It will stop at the Inverness Fieldhouse, at the north end of Highland Road from 1:45 p.m. to 2:45 p.m. and from 4:30 p.m. to 5:15 p.m. Wednesdays.

It will stop at the Lincoln School 1021 Ridgewood Ln., from 3:15 p.m. to 4:15 p.m. Wednesdays. The bookmobile also will stop at the Bethel Lutheran Church, 2150 Frontage Rd., from 5:30 p.m. to 6:30 p.m. Wednesdays.

The bookmobile's Saturday stops will include the Palatine Mall, Hicks and Baldwin roads, from 9 a.m. to 11:30 a.m., and the Rand Grove Apartments, 741 Rand Grove Ln., from 11:45 a.m. to 12:30 p.m.

The bookmobile will stop at the Countryside Mall, 1010 Sterling St., from 1 p.m. to 2:45 p.m. Saturdays. It also will stop in the Winston Knolls subdivision on East Charleston Drive from 3 p.m. to 4 p.m., and at the Willow Creek School, 225 S. Rohlfing Rd., from 4:15 to 5:15 p.m.

The library is renting the bookmobile from the North Suburban Library System this year under the federally subsidized "Project Plus" program to introduce library services to Palatine Township residents.

Village and unincorporated area residents will decide in a referendum this spring to decide on including the unincorporated areas in the library's new district.

Scouting news

Cub Scout Pack 246 will sponsor a cartoon show Saturday in the Virginia Lake School gymnasium, 925 N. Rohlfing Rd., Palatine.

Admission will be 50 cents for 1 and 3 p.m. showings. Refreshments will be available. Proceeds from the show will be used for scout projects.

Being tested at Conant

An 'alternative' for potential dropout

by KATHIERINE BOYCE

Education is supposed to be democratic. The idea is to provide a free public school system for everyone — education for the masses.

But for some students the system just doesn't work. People learn in different ways and some students simply don't make it in schools designed for "everyone."

"We take one program and throw them all in because we're democratic and then start squeezing down on the ones who make trouble," said Leo Butler, assistant principal at Conant High School in Hoffman Estates.

But Conant students are given a choice. This year, five high school systems are operating at once in a building serving 2,300 students. The systems range from the traditional program for freshmen to the "time-priority system" exempting students from class sessions if they have completed assignments and want to work on something else. Geared toward the motivated student — the "achiever" — these programs give the student more independence and freedom to learn on his own.

THE NEWEST SYSTEM — alternative education — is for the student who doesn't succeed in a traditional structure, one who does poorly in class, gets frustrated and often is a discipline problem. He's the potential dropout.

Alternative education is being tried at Conant this year. If it proves successful, Dist. 211 officials may expand the system to the other four high schools in the district.

Students in alternative education work individually with teacher Cathy Connor on assignments in math, English, consumer education — any course required for graduation. Each student has a set of assignments which he works on at his own pace.

BUTLER BELIEVES the alternative-education program has been a factor in the decreased dropout rate at Conant. Last school year 33 students dropped out by Nov. 1, but this year only 14 students dropped out in the same period.

Some students still drop out but Butler feels "everyone who has dropped out of this program would have dropped out sooner." There are some failures, but there also are "a few very exciting cases — just complete turnarounds."

One boy often became hostile in regular classes last year. He refused to do his work and constantly disrupted the class. This year he was placed in Miss Connor's room, where he sat at a table and read magazines. For two weeks she tried to get him to work on a math assignment. He ignored her and she left him alone. One day he walked into class, picked up his assignment and started working. Today he's almost caught up on his work and he's lost most of his hostility.

EDUCATORS HAVE spent "too many years hammering away at behavior" and not enough time finding out why students misbehave, Butler said. When a student doesn't do an English assignment, more should be done than simply failing him in the course, Butler said. "We must somehow identify in a deeply human way the needs of kids and know who they really are."

In the past schools "took a whole bunch of people, pushed them into a program and prodded them through like cattle," Miss Connor said. But if education is supposed to be for everyone, schools should help the student who can't make it in a system designed for the majority, she believes.

Miss Connor has been involved in alternative-education programs during most of her teaching career and she has almost completed a master's degree in alternative education.

PROBABLY THE IDEAL situation is a school with an entire alternative-education department, a whole staff of teachers and an entire curriculum of alternative programs, Miss Connor said. But she realizes that's a dream. In public schools, it probably is impossible to design a program for each child.

Miss Connor said the Conant program probably is the next best thing. Students "do much better in my room," she said, and "part of it, of course, is I don't have as many kids in my room."

Butler agrees. "Many just need more one-to-one attention."

There are rarely more than five or six students in Miss Connor's room at one time. Some she sees just two or three times. Some are there three periods each day before they go to regular classrooms. Some need alternative education for just a few weeks and some need it all semester.

BUTLER SEES ALL the school structures at Conant from alternative education to independent study programs, as a set of concentric circles. Students move from one structure to the next as they develop ability, maturity and responsibility. Students are not locked into one structure throughout their high school career.

If students can't conform to school, educators say, perhaps the answer is to make the school conform to the students. In fact, Butler sees alternative education as "one more effort to adjust the atmosphere to the needs of kids."

"You can find a lot of kids who say 'I hate school,'" Butler said, "but I've never heard a kid say I hate learning."

ONE-TO-ONE class sessions between students and teacher Cathy Connor are the basis of the new alternative education program at Conant High School in Hoffman Estates. Educators believe the individualized instruction helps potential dropouts become successful students.

Three candidates seek representation opment of parks in the rural areas. Dorsch is concerned that this committee has not started functioning.

"I have not received a report on the funds that the former rural board has to spend, and this ad hoc committee has not functioned while the park board has been making changes in the Home and Oak park plan like they are supposed to," Dorsch said.

"This disturbs me somewhat because the ad hoc committee was the assurance that the rural park district had that it would still have some say-so as to how its funds would be used and what park development would take place in its areas," Dorsch said.

"I want to be sure that what has been provided in the merger ordinance is going to hold up, and that this ad hoc group isn't going to be a paper committee. I want to be sure that facilities are built in the areas they are needed in, and that children in the unincorporated areas can easily get to them," Dorsch said.

DORSCH SAID HE sees an immediate need for parks in the Pinehurst subdivision in the northeast corner of Palatine Township and the southwest corner of the township in the vicinity of Harper College.

"Just by the physical nature of this widely dispersed unincorporated area, not being able to think like one park district yet can't be helped. Having fair representation of all residents on the board would certainly help in making this transition," Dorsch said.

All three candidates agree they are not running for the park board to represent only the unincorporated-area residents.

"We will represent the entire park district, and will bring with us the expertise that we've gained from serving on the rural board and living in the unincorporated area. This is something that former Palatine Park Board members don't have," Mrs. Picardi said.

TURNER STRESSED that he and other rural park board commissioners were elected to the rural board to develop park facilities.

"I feel that I have an obligation to see at least the beginnings of this rural development through during the first two years, and that's why I want to serve on the new board. The board will do an excellent job, I know, but it means a lot to allow the unincorporated areas to have a good, strong voice during this transition," he said.

Only 3 file for open Inverness park seats

Only three candidates have filed petitions for three seats up for election on the Inverness Park Board April 15.

Walter Anderson, park board president, will not run for reelection to the board. Anderson 1660 Beaver Pond Rd., has served as president of the park board for four years.

Houghton Bner, 1751 First Rd., has announced his candidacy for Anderson's six-year seat on the board and has no opponents.

Comr. Donald Kieffer, 1031 Dairy Ln., is seeking election to a six-year term. Comr. Sargent Heath, 549 Rob Roy Ct., is seeking election to a two-year seat.

Both incumbents were appointed to board vacancies during the past year.

Palatine GOP to elect officers

The 1975 officers of the Palatine Township Regular Republican Organization will be elected at 8 p.m. Thursday at the Palatine Township Hall, 37 N. Plum Grove Rd.

Harold B. Smith, state central committeeman, and Carl Hansen, county commissioner and chairman of the Suburban Republican Committeemen's Assn., will address the meeting.

The theme of the meeting is "Directions? 1975." The meeting is open to the public.

Kenroy to seek county rezoning

Rob Roy apartment project voted down

by LYNN ASINOF

The Mount Prospect Village Board Tuesday night in effect rejected plans to build 2,350 apartment units on the 200-acre Rob Roy Golf Course.

Although the board voted 4-3 to reopen negotiations with the developer, Kenroy Inc., Skokie, the board was one vote short of the five needed to approve the project.

Kenroy officials have indicated they would seek rezoning from the county.

A capacity crowd of some 150 Mount Prospect and Prospect Heights residents cheered when the final vote was announced.

TRUSTEE O. T. GUSTUS cast the deciding vote, charging that the northeast section of the village could not stand the density of the proposed project. The golf course is east of Wheeling Road between Euclid Avenue and Camp McDonald Road in Wheeling Township.

I just thought the density was too high for that area. It was like setting a whole new city in the middle of a single-family area," he said. "I could not live with the density."

Others voting against the project were trustees Richard N. Hendricks and George B. Anderson. Both had previously announced their opposition to the development.

After the vote, residents rushed to the front of the room to shake Gustus' hand. Many promised to vote for him in the April village election.

"I voted it because I believed it," Gustus told the residents.

Kenroy's Roy Gottlieb, however, said the residents would live to regret the vote. "It is my opinion that the people who are in favor of open space lost on that vote," he said.

GOTTLIEB SAID earlier Kenroy would seek county zoning for 4,500 units if turned down by the village. Under the defeated proposal, only 2,350 units would have been built, allowing the River Trails Park District to purchase the 18-hole golf course for open space.

Any decision on applying for county zoning will be made next week, Gottlieb said. He said that he would have to consult with the present owners of the golf course and Kenroy's attorneys.

While Gustus did not announce his position until the final vote, other previously undecided trustees announced their support for the project. A hostile crowd hissed and catcalled the trustees who said the Kenroy development was a good compromise that would preserve open space.

Trustee Marie L. Caylor, who lives in the northeast section of the village, made an emotional speech outlining her reasons for supporting the Kenroy development. She said that because the land would eventually be developed, residents in the area should work to get the best possible development. She said the proposed project would preserve open space, improve the local tax base and reduce flooding.

MRS. CAYLOR said some residents told her "what might happen to me at an April election depending on what I do tonight. I don't like that," she said, making it clear she would support the project.

Trustee Kenneth V. Scholten also spoke in favor of the project, saying that a decision for the project would be justified 20 years from now when the golf course is still open space.

Mayor Robert D. Teichert and Trustee E. F. Richardson also voted to reopen negotiations.

Hendricks called for a show of hands of those in the audience to see who supported and who opposed the project. He then said he would vote against Kenroy because he represented the people.

Palwaukee fails runway-design rules

by STEVE FORSYTH

Palwaukee Airport near Wheeling apparently fails to meet several Federal Aviation Administration standards for runway design, a congressional subcommittee studying air traffic safety has found.

U.S. Rep. Jack Brooks, D-Tex., chairman of the government activities subcommittee of the House Committee on Government Operations, said, "If the facts presented are accurate, Palwaukee apparently does not meet several FAA regulations contained in Part 77, Code of Federal Regulations."

Brooks said FAA officials have told him the standards in question are not a threat to air safety, and they plan no immediate action to make Palwaukee comply with the regulations.

In a letter to William Rogers, chairman of Wheeling's Palwaukee Steering Committee, Brooks said the airport "does not appear to have established the required surface distances at the end of Runway 34-16, does not have 500 or 1,000-foot primary surface widths paralleling the central line of the runway at certain locations, and does not appear to have the threshold lights located the proper distances from the edges of Palatine, Wolf and Hintz roads."

BROOKS SAID his conclusions were drawn after a review of information supplied by Rogers' committee and a discussion with FAA officials in Washington, D.C.

"It is 'FAA's position that these standards are not mandatory, but simply recommended guidelines,'" Brooks said.

A recent transportation study approved by the Northeastern Illinois Planning Commission mentioned that several million dollars in improvements would have to be made at Palwaukee to meet federal standards if it were to be converted to a municipal airport, as recommended in the plan.

"FAA also takes the position that it has no authority to regulate the length of the runway or established aircraft weight limitations at privately owned airports," Brooks said. He recommended to Rogers that the local authorities seek enforcement of the conditions in the zoning permit.

"It is suggested that you attempt to establish the fact that Runway 34-16 exceeds the length and weight limits prescribed by the Cook County Zoning Board," he said. "It is my understanding that FAA would not attempt to prevent a state or local authority from enforcing the zoning permit."

THE COUNTY, in a joint suit with Wheeling, recently lost an appeal to control the size and weight of airplanes landing at Palwaukee. After the Illinois Appellate Court decision in September 1974, a request was sent to the Illinois Supreme Court to hear the case. The Supreme Court has not yet answered the request, Rogers said.

The Appellate Court panel of three judges said the right to regulate the weight of aircraft is under the jurisdiction of the FAA, and not the county or village. The county maintains it had control because of zoning agreements made when the airport runways were built and extended.

Rogers said the court has said the authority to control use of the airport is in the jurisdiction of the FAA, but the FAA has declined any authority except to control air traffic and traffic patterns.

"If the FAA doesn't have the authority, the county should have it," Rogers said. He said the issue may be heard by the Supreme Court because it could affect the operations of more than 300 airports in Illinois. Rogers says counties control airports in most areas of the state.

Rogers and other village residents have complained about low-flying planes approaching the airport over Wheeling, including one glide path that extends directly over Holmes Junior High School, 221 S. Wolf Rd., Wheeling.

ROGERS SAID the extension of Runway 34-16 in 1963 was endorsed by the FAA at a hearing before the County Zoning Board, and he charges the FAA knew the extension would violate FAA regulations and guidelines. He said the FAA also changed the landing pattern on the runway so it passed over Holmes school, although the county agreement required approaches over the forest preserve areas.

Plant's side effects being tested on 220

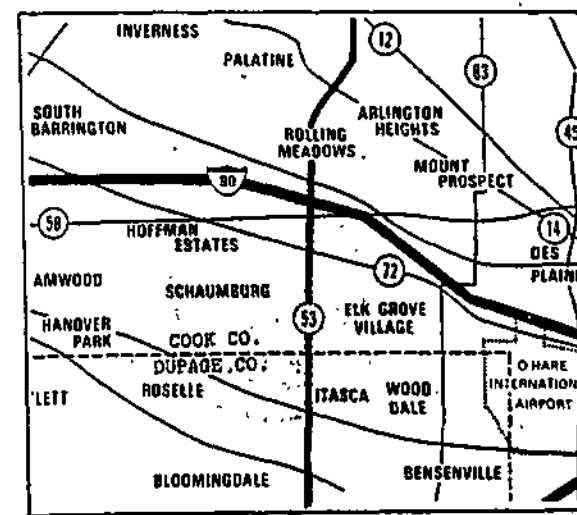

Tests to determine if local residents will be affected by the operation of the John E. Egan Water Reclamation Plant in Schaumburg are being conducted on 220 persons. The residents all live within a two-mile radius of the new filtration plant, between Meacham Road and Ill. Rte. 53 south of Schaumburg Road.

The $43 million plant will open this spring to provide sewage treatment for more than 160,000 persons living in parts of Schaumburg, Palatine and Elk Grove townships. It will be the world's largest tertiary treatment plant with a capacity of 30 million gallons per day.

The tests under way have been commissioned by the federal Environmental Protection Agency to determine if the aeration process that will be used at the plant for waste filtration can produce harmful side effects to nearby residents.

Samples of blood, hair, human waste and saliva as well as soil and water samples from the area will be taken at four different times, twice before the plant opens and twice after it opens.

Volunteers participating in the testing are being paid. The first testing was completed in October and the second was finished Friday. The final two tests will be conducted in October and next January after the plant is operating.

'Dynamite Night' a real blast

It was "Dynamite Night" at Lincoln Junior High School Friday and the evening really was a blast! Students, teachers and parents combined their efforts and talents to produce a super evening of fun and excitement.

Highlight of the event was a "Teacher Talent Show" sandwiched in between dancing to a rock band, eating and playing games.

The talent show provided a program of guitar music and singing by band director David Metzler and language arts teacher John Pedicone, backed up by the school's jazz band. Even Principal Donald Driver joined in the fun and did a solo number, strumming and singing.

Both of the school's jazz bands played as part of the show — the very polished jazz band and the quite proficient "lab" jazz band. During a break between the two, members of the faculty — dressed in outlandish hillbilly outfits — played kazoes, triangles and horns. The teachers participating were Kathy Bell, Janet Brankman, William Crannell, Rosemary Finch, Ellen Gnoyke, Debbie Kovich, Ann Martyniuk, Janet Munz, Judith Niemuth, Kathy Weir and assistant principal Sam Donatucci, who directed the group. Rosemary Finch was chairman of the faculty show.

THE TEACHER musical selections were items such as "You Are My Sunshine" and "She'll Be Coming Around the Mountain." The jazz band numbers, on the other hand, were popular Jon Denver and Tony Orlando and Dawn variety.

The talent show musical finale was "Tie a Yellow Ribbon Round the Old Oak Tree." Metzler and Pedicone led the crowd and the jazz band in the number — and it felt like "Sensurround" in the Lincoln girls' gym. The kids stomped, whistled, clapped and sang — and the room shook. It was great!

Actually, Dynamite Night started early in the evening, during the dinner hour. Food was served in the school lunch room and a variety of games were played. Then the kids went to the boys gym to dance to the music of "The Horizons" rock band made up of Prospect high school students, several of whom were Lincoln graduates. The band played again after the talent show.

"DYNAMITE NIGHT" was a ways-and-means project of the Lincoln PTA, co-chaired by Lois Brothers and Helen Miller. Money realized from the event will help support the school's cultural arts program.

The Lincoln kids did extensive decorating for the happening and Lida Miller, a seventh grader of 131 S. Kenilworth, was in charge. Students also manned the coat check room and handled the food operation.

Dynamite Night got its name from Mark Felferek, 303 S. Albert, who won a name-selection contest. Steve O'Mara, 18 S. Wa-Pella, played "Mister Dynamite" for the evening, wearing a wild outfit and an 'explosive' wig.

There was a raffle with local merchants providing about 50 prizes.

By the way, throughout the eventful evening, guidance counselor Dan Vondras played checkers. He's quite an expert at the game and was challenged by many, but never lost.

Recycling center to close Sunday

Mount Prospect's recycling center will be closed Sunday because it has been misused by people depositing their old glass and newspapers, officials said.

"I'm just so disgusted with the people who come there," said Natalie Karney, deputy village engineer. "People throw all kinds of garbage in the bins. They are just very inconsiderate of the whole thing."

Mrs. Karney said residents have been ignoring instructions for the disposal of newspapers and glass. Although the instructions are posted, she said residents still contaminate the glass bins by mixing glass colors, leaving metal rings around bottle necks and throwing other types of refuse in the glass bins.

"It never really was a moneymaking operation to begin with," Mrs. Karney said, noting that it is expensive to haul away the contents of a contaminated glass bin. She said that because contaminated glass ends up in a landfill, the idea of a recycling center was being defeated.

THE MONEYMAKING part of the recycling center, the newsprint operation, has become less profitable in recent months. Mrs. Karney said there is a surplus of newsprint for recycling, which has reduced the price from $38 a ton in 1973 to $8 a ton in 1975.

Mrs. Karney said that while the newsprint recycling operation could bring in $80 to $100 a month, this did not include the cost of supervisory help.

With the recycling center in a shopping center at Rand and Central roads, Mrs. Karney said supervision also was a problem. "It's on private property, and because we don't have constant supervision, the place is often a mess," she said.

IF THE CENTER is reopened, Mrs. Karney said it will have to be on municipal property. But she said village properties are too small to accommodate the center.

Although the Mount Prospect Junior Women's Club has recruited volunteer groups to operate the center, the recruiting ended because of lack of help.

With the closing of the center, residents will have to travel to either Arlington Heights or Des Plaines to deposit their old newspapers and bottles.

Rosemary Argus to head ballot

Incumbent Rosemary Argus will head the Mount Prospect Park District's ballot in the April 1 board election.

Although Richard P. Coleman and William Hickey were the first to turn in nominating petitions for the election, both had to refile their petitions because they failed to specify whether they were seeking four- or six-year terms.

Park Atty. William Ward said the refiling would mean a shuffling of the ballot positions, since the first set of Coleman's and Hickey's petitions were technically invalid.

Park Pres. Robert T. Jackson said the park district might be letting itself in for a lawsuit if it did not strictly follow the order of filing in preparing the ballot. He said that losers in the election might charge that preparation of the ballot cost them their victory.

Both Coleman and Hickey join Theodore Pandak, former Mount Prospect zoning board member, in challenging incumbents Rosemary Argus and William Selep. Selep's name will be second on the ballot, followed by Pandak, Hickey and Coleman.

Victor Rose is the only candidate who has filed for the four-year seat which was vacated with the death of Roland C. Becker.

slope, Rogers said, although an FAA spokesman said no glide slope angle has been established for the runway yet.

Brooks said the complaint that planes fly less than 100 feet over the school is true, but he said that happens in several locations throughout the country.

"I share your concern about FAA's lack of emphasis with regard to safety and health of people on the ground," he said. "The rationale seems to be simply that air safety will enhance the safety of people on the ground."

BECAUSE HIS committee is charged primarily with overseeing government operations, Brooks said, "I am again bringing the Palwaukee situation to the personal attention of the administrator of the FAA. Hopefully he will take action to alleviate your concern."

'Arsenic, Old Lace' on MacArthur stage

"Arsenic and Old Lace" will be presented at 7:30 p.m. Thursday and Friday by students at MacArthur Junior High School, 700 N. Schoenbeck Rd., Prospect Heights.

The play, by Joseph Kesserling, presents two little old ladies, played by Bridget Hlisen and Cindy Pavetto, who poison lonely old men to put them out of their misery. They commission Teddy Browster, played by Ron Schumacher, to bury the bodies in "Panama," the cellar.

Then the gangster-nephew, Jonathan Browster, played by Leo Levin, returns and discovers 12 bodies in the cellar with Dr. Einstein, his accomplice, played by Nick Miller.

Tickets cost $1 for adults and 50 cents for students.

Wed teachers can work at same school

by BOB GALLAS

The High School Dist. 214 Board of Education has reversed its policy of prohibiting married teachers from working at the same school.

The board's action came Monday night as a result of a meeting between attorneys for the teachers' union and the school board.

School attorneys changed their earlier opinion that the board had the right to separate teachers who marry because they said it could affect their performance as educators. The new opinion states that the board is required to prove teacher performance is negatively affected by marriage to separate the teachers.

THE BOARD ACTION apparently was prompted by an appeal of the policy by two district teachers who were transferred after they married. William and Judith Hastert married while working at John Hersey High School, Arlington Heights. Hastert was transferred to Rolling Meadows High School.

Hastert said Tuesday he was pleased by the policy change but was not sure he would transfer back to Hersey immediately because other personnel shifts would result if he did.

"I will go back sometime," said Hastert, who taught at Hersey with Mrs. Hastert for five years before they were married. The Hasterts are the only couple immediately affected by the change, although several couples married during Christmas vacation would have been transferred soon had the policy not been changed.

Building improvements to be studied

A "very rough" list of building improvements, which could cost about $24 million, will be presented tonight by a High School Dist. 214 citizens' committee.

The 40-member committee will meet at 8 p.m. in the district administration center, 799 W. Kensington Rd., Mount Prospect.

James Stoll, committee chairman, said Tuesday the rough cost estimate for the massive list of improvements proposed for the district's eight schools, was "subject to professional refinement" and was not final.

action by the association if the policy had not been changed.

"Our lawyer had investigated and researched the legal possibilities," Ailberg said. "We were reluctant to pursue that sort of action with this type of situation, something that open communication can solve."

Correction

The date of the Prospect Heights Park Board election was incorrectly listed in Tuesday's Herald. The correct date is April 1.

Two incumbents and five newcomers are seeking the two available terms.

Will put bank in office building

Developer drops plan for shopping center

Suburban bank-chain head Gerald Fitzgerald has scrapped plans for a shopping center and bowling alley at the site of a bank planned for Arlington Heights Road south of Palatine Road in Arlington Heights.

Fitzgerald, whose earlier proposal met opposition from the village plan commission, Tuesday submitted plans that call for a bank within a three-story office building.

The proposed bank would be called the Suburban National Bank of Arlington Heights. If the bank is granted a federal charter, it would be the eighth in Fitzgerald's chain.

The building proposed by Fitzgerald would have a central courtyard. He said the bank would take about half the first floor, with the remainder of the space leased as office area.

Lawyers and other professionals, but not doctors, probably would be the tenants, he said. "I don't want a lot of sick people hanging around the lobby," he said.

A restaurant and a cigar and candy stand would be included in the building, he said, and would be primarily for the convenience of the tenants.

MEMBERS OF THE village plan commission urged Fitzgerald Tuesday to increase the green areas of the design and to provide landscaping.

He assured the commissioners final plans would include "first class" landscaping and building design. "We don't do a shabby job," he said.

Fitzgerald and his architect, Ted Meyers, are scheduled to meet again with the commissioners in three weeks.

and with the full plan commission May 15. They said they would have more detailed plans for the next meeting with the subcommittee.

FITZGERALD HAS applied for a federal charter to organize the bank. He said he expects to be granted the charter within four months, despite opposition from other banks in the village.

He said the other banks, which he did not identify, contended that Arlington Heights was being adequately served by the existing five banks and that Fitzgerald's planned operation would result in the community being "overbanked."

By using national statistics, Fitzgerald contended, a town the size of Arlington Heights could support about 15 banks. He expressed confidence that his group would be approved the license.

Committee still undecided on new sidewalk policy

The village board's public health and safety committee made no apparent progress Tuesday night toward recommending a new sidewalk policy for Arlington Heights.

Committee members squabbled over whether a map should be made spelling out block by block throughout the entire village where sidewalks should be constructed, or if a policy statement to the village's Board of Local Improvements would be sufficient.

The committee reviewed reports from school districts within the village that, as expected, recommended that sidewalks be installed along major thoroughfares such as Dundee, Hintz, Central and Arlington Heights roads near schools.

THE COMMITTEE'S indecision left hundreds of Arlington Heights homeowners in the northeast section, Scarsdale and Stonegate, wondering whether they will be faced with special assessment for a sidewalk in front of their houses.

Some 35 homeowners attended Tuesday night's meeting and one of them, a Scarsdale resident, called on the board to decide the sidewalk question promptly and get on to what he called the more serious problems of crime and juvenile delinquency.

Trustee Alice Harms, committee chairman, scheduled the next meeting of the committee for Feb. 10 at which time trustees will present their suggested changes in the wording of the village's 1968 sidewalk policy.

In the meantime, BOLI Pres. David Patterson said he would recommend that sidewalk special assessment proceeding be held up until the matter is resolved.

DURING THE MEETING, Patterson clashed with former BOLI president, now village Trustee Russell H. Colvin, over whether the proposal to put sidewalks in parts of Scarsdale and Stonegate violates a section of the 1968 policy that exempts established neighborhoods without sidewalks from their installation.

Patterson said the overriding concern in the installation of sidewalks is the safety of pedestrians, particularly school children, and that this justifies sidewalks along Windsor Drive in Stonegate and in parts of Scarsdale.

But Colvin, a Scarsdale resident, disagreed.

"We do have a history of safety in these areas," he said. "BOLI thinks all they have to do is show a picture of children in the street to show that we have a safety problem."

Parks to spend $2,400 to plug referendum

The Arlington Heights Park District will spend about $1,500 to print and distribute a brochure explaining its March 1 referendum.

The park district also will pay Lester Plotz, 1004 N. Mitchell Ave., Arlington Heights, $900 from its corporate funds to write the brochure. It is designed to explain the reasons behind the referendum, what the increased revenues provided by the referendum will be used for, and what increase in taxes will result.

The referendum will have three separate questions including the issuance of $37,000 in bonds for park maintenance, a maximum 5 cents per $100 assessed valuation increase in the district's corporate tax levy, and a maximum 4 cents per $100 assessed valuation in the district's recreation tax levy.

JOHN G. WOODS, chairman of the citizens' financial plan committee, said committee members will meet with Plotz to discuss the brochure. The committee was established last year to study the park district's financial problems.

Woods said the brochure will be distributed to residents as soon as possible.

The financial plan committee also will conduct public meetings with civic organizations and homeowners' groups to explain the referendum and answer questions, Woods said.

Woods said homeowners' associations or civic groups that would like to meet with the committee should call the park district at 593-3282.

Local priests elected Archbishop advisers

Two local clerics have been elected to offices in the Presbyteral Senate of the Roman Catholic Archdiocese of Chicago.

The Rev. Harold B. Murphy, associate pastor of St. James Church, Arlington Heights, was elected secretary of the group. The Rev. Philip Clifford of the Victorian Fathers in Arlington Heights was reelected treasurer.

The Presbyteral Senate is an elected advisory body to Archbishop John Cardinal Cody and represents 2,600 priests in the Chicago area.

by TONI GINETTI

Being a guinea pig for science may be valuable for mankind, but it's not much of a way to spend a second birthday.

Little Kristen Schweitzer of Hoffman Estates had put up with getting her hair trimmed and saying "ah" for the girl who dabbed a cotton swab in her throat. But when the woman neared with the needle to draw blood, Kristen had had about enough.

And when a lower lip starts quivering, you don't tell a 2-year-old to be a good girl because she's helping to determine if living near a sewage-treatment plant will be harmful to her health someday.

For Kristen, her three sisters and parents and 200 other persons living in Schaumburg, Hoffman Estates, Rolling Meadows, Elk Grove Village, Itasca and Roselle, these test results will determine if the operation of the John E. Egan Water Reclamation Plant in Schaumburg may cause health problems to those living near it.

Plant's side effects being tested on 220

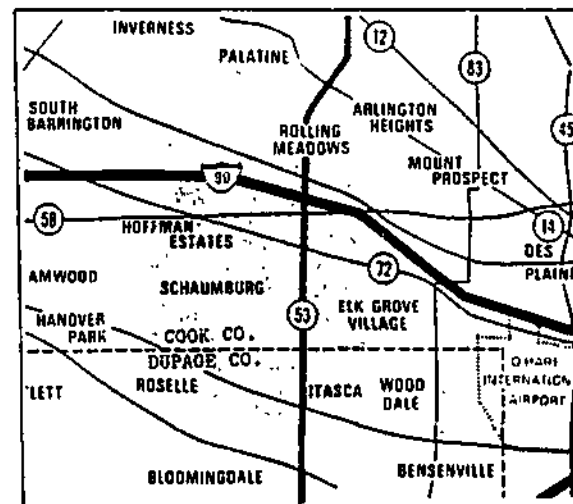

Tests to determine if local residents will be affected by the operation of the John E. Egan Water Reclamation Plant in Schaumburg are being conducted on 220 persons. The residents all live within a two-mile radius of the new filtration plant, between Meacham Road and Ill. Rte. 53 south of Schaumburg Road.

The $43 million plant will open this spring to provide sewage treatment for more than 160,000 persons living in parts of Schaumburg, Palatine and Elk Grove townships. It will be the world's largest tertiary treatment plant with a capacity of 30 million gallons per day.

The tests under way have been commissioned by the federal Environmental Protection Agency to determine if the aeration process that will be used at the plant for waste filtration can produce harmful side effects to nearby residents.

Samples of blood, hair, human waste and saliva as well as soil and water samples from the area will be taken at four different times, twice before the plant opens and twice after it opens.

Volunteers participating in the testing are being paid. The first testing was completed in October and the second was finished Friday. The final two tests will be conducted in October and next January after the plant is operating.

Parks to get two village buses for $1 per year

The Arlington Heights Park District apparently will get the use of two village-owned buses for $1 a year.

The village paid $57,000 for the two vehicles when it bought them 1½ years ago for use by Metron Systems Corp. in an ill-fated commuter-bus operation.

Now the village board's community services committee has recommended to lease the buses on a year-to-year basis to the park district for just $1.

"We're overwhelmed, overjoyed," said Thomas Thornton, director of the park district. The district has been using the two buses daily for the past several months to transport children and senior citizens to district-sponsored events.

"We use them for trips into Chicago, ski trips for the Over 50 Club and the Gold Key Club," Thornton said.

UNDER THE AGREEMENT proposed by the community services committee, the park district would pay the cost of gasoline, oil and insurance for the buses. The village would perform routine maintenance.

At one time, the community services committee considered getting the buses appraised and then selling them. But trustees on the committee think the village should keep the vehicles for possible use in a future bus system.

When it discontinued operating in Arlington Heights at the end of last May, Metron Systems owed $8,355.45 for the rental of the two buses and the use of a village garage. The company also owed $4,000 of a $8,000 loan approved by the village board to keep the bus operation going.

The village and Metron signed an agreement whereby the company has been repaying the debt in monthly installments of at least $100.

THE VILLAGE administration first proposed selling the buses to the park district for $50,000. But park officials rejected the price as too high.

Village officials then said they would advertise for bids to determine the market value of the vehicles. But they ultimately rejected this idea as unethical if the intent was not to sell the buses to the highest bidder but only to arrive at a price to charge the park district.

Officials finally said they would get a professional appraisal of the equipment.

Now it all seems to be forgotten in favor of the village's keeping the buses for possible future use and in the meantime permitting the park district to use them virtually without charge.

BUFFALO BILL and Sitting Bull will be portrayed by Scott Waara, left, and Charles Constantino when Arlington High School students present Arthur Kopit's play, 'Indians.' Play begins Friday

'Indians' (stage variety) coming to Arlington High

Arthur Kopit's play, "Indians," will be staged two weekends beginning Friday at Arlington High School.

The play is patterned after the Wild West Shows which toured this country and Europe at the turn of the century, but with a small twist — the Indians, led by Sitting Bull, are the heroes.

Although somewhat satirical, "Indians" is neither a tragedy nor a comedy. The play "should teach us something in the present," said director Lyovonne Trad. "The play touches upon the process of mythology and how we create our heroes. It also shows that the Indians got a raw deal."

Display case offered for groups to use

Tickets can be reserved by calling the school, 253-0200. Admission is $2 for adults, $1.50 for students. The play will be staged Friday, Saturday and Feb. 7 and 8.

Scott Waara will portray Buffalo Bill Cody and Charles Constantino will play Sitting Bull.

Other players include: Matthew Dacy as Sen. Logan; Thomas Anderson will appear as both Sen. Dawes and the first reporter; Timothy Walker, Sen. Morgan; Douglas Martin, John Grass; Chris Carpenter will portray Spotted Tail and Chief Joseph; Greg Terrell as the Interpreter and White House usher; Douglas Lidge, Grand Duke Alexis, Uncas and Poncho; and Tony Manos, Ned Bumline.

A recognition plaque was awarded to Jerry Brenner, outgoing president, who served for two years.

Wed teachers now can work in same school

by BOB GALLAS

The High School Dist. 214 Board of Education has reversed its policy of prohibiting married teachers from working at the same school.

The board's action came Monday night as a result of a meeting between attorneys for the teachers' union and the school board.

School attorneys changed their earlier opinion that the board had the right to separate teachers who marry because they said it could affect their performance as educators. The new opinion states that the board is required to prove teacher performance is negatively affected by marriage to separate the teachers.

THE BOARD ACTION apparently was prompted by an appeal of the policy by two district teachers who were transferred after they married. William and Judith Hastert married while working at John Hersey High School, Arlington Heights. Hastert was transferred to Rolling Meadows High School.

Hastert said Tuesday he was pleased by the policy change but was not sure he would transfer back to Hersey immediately because other personnel shifts would result if he did.

"I will go back sometime," said Hastert, who taught at Hersey with Mrs. Hastert for five years before they were married. The Hasterts are the only couple immediately affected by the change, although several couples married during Christmas vacation would have been transferred soon had the policy not been changed.

GRANT AHLBERG, teacher union head, said there was a chance of legal action by the association if the policy had not been changed.

"Our lawyer had investigated and researched the legal possibilities," Ahlberg said. "We were reluctant to pursue that sort of action with this type of situation, something that open communication can solve."

List of building improvements to be studied

A "very rough" list of building improvements, which could cost about $24 million, will be presented tonight by a High School Dist. 214 citizens' committee.

The 40-member committee will meet at 8 p.m. in the district administration center, 799 W. Kensington Rd., Mount Prospect.

James Stoll, committee chairman, said Tuesday the rough cost estimate for the massive list of improvements proposed for the district's eight schools, was "subject to professional refinement" and was not final.

Stoll estimated that half of the total cost involved would go into major improvements and renovation at the district's oldest schools, Forest View and Arlington.

Stoll said the committee will decide tonight whether to request professional help for estimating costs of proposed additions and improvements.

The committee has been working for the past several months, touring buildings to assess needs and getting cost estimates for improvements that range from fieldhouses and swimming pools to greenhouses and additional classroom space.

Seventh library board candidate files petition

Three incumbents and four newcomers are vying for four seats on the Arlington Heights Memorial Library Board.

Jan Tucker, 35, of 107 W. Noyes St., became the seventh candidate, filing her petition shortly before the deadline.

Mrs. Tucker has been a resident of the village for 2½ years. She and her family moved to Arlington Heights from Peoria, where she was active in church women's boards and the American Assn. of University Women.

Mrs. Tucker said she is running for the board because she believes the library "is very much the focus of the community. It's a vital, ongoing force. It's often hard to find the focus of suburban communities, but I feel that that's a good thing," she said.

While praising the library for its "most helpful, outgoing staff," Mrs. Tucker said she would like to see the bookmobile program strengthened and the reference facilities expanded to aid the many young and continuing-education students who study at the library.

Mrs. Tucker said the library's proposed tax-ceiling increase from 23 to 40 cents per $100 assessed valuation seems "logical," but added, "I'm not sure that I would have gone to the 40-cent limit."

She said she is "all in favor" of the proposed $720,000 book-purchasing bonds and the proposed $2.86-million library building expansion. "Since the cultural commission could not raise their funds, it seems to me that the library, besides filling its own needs, could also serve the community. I feel that that's a good thing," she said.

Mrs. Tucker joins incumbents Richard Frisbie, Thomas Dooley and Robert Melroy, along with newcomers Rldgely Jackson, Janet Bowes and William Cook, in the race.

Forest View to present 'Story Theater'

"Story Theater" by Paul Sills will be presented by Forest View High School students Thursday, Saturday and Sunday at the school, 2121 S. Goebbert Rd., Arlington Heights.

The play, presented on Broadway in 1970, dramatizes "Grimm's Fairy Tales" and "Aesop's Fables" but is not just for children, said Jeff Lovell, director.

Characters play several different parts and frequently use pantomime in the work, presented on a bare stage with a minimum of costume.

Two Sunday performances of the play will include dinner and additional entertainment. A spaghetti dinner will be served in the school's cafeteria by singing waiters and waitresses dressed in Italian costumes. Choral students, including the "Towns Criers" and "New Dawns" will also provide entertainment.

THE SUNDAY dinners will be at 1 p.m. and 6:30 p.m.

The Thursday and Saturday performances of the play will begin at 8 p.m.

Tickets for the play only are $1.50 for adults and $1 for students. Tickets for the Sunday dinner/theater/entertainment package are $5, $3 for pre-high school students.

The cast for "Story Theater" includes Dorla Owen, Mary Ravner, Dave Turner, Art Stevens, Paul Burneson, Sue Schmid, Julie Illickley, Herb Brant, John Tucky, Lynn Anderson and Lenore Marcotta.

Student directors are Mary Siragusa, Roland Miller and Mary Jane Brown.

Enrollment rise may force school boundary moves

Growing enrollments may cause changes next year in attendance boundaries at Field, Tarkington and Alcott schools in Wheeling-Buffalo Grove Dist. 21.

The schools are at capacity this year and are in developing areas where increased enrollment is expected, said John Barger, associate superintendent.

Sandburg, Stevenson, Twain and Irving elementary schools have empty classrooms where students could be transferred next year, he said. A citizens' committee will be asked to look into the enrollment figures and recommend possible solutions.

The school board has recommended forming citizens committees to investigate many problems in Dist. 21 and to develop a long-range plan for the district.

The board is asking all Dist. 21 schools and parents organizations to present areas for study by March 13.
